Postwar Resolution Gets Sudden Go-Ahead

Senate Group's Hand Freed by New Advices, Maybe Russian

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Important new developments on the diplomatic and military fronts occurring last week were reported yesterday to have "freed the hands" of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee so that a postwar peace resolution may be reported out for Senate debate within the next two or three weeks.

Authoritative sources hinted that these developments concerned new advices from Russia, and asserted that within a short time the American public would learn of these factors justifying the complete volte face of the committee. Only last week its chairman, Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas declared that a postwar resolution would not be reported until after the tripartite conferences of the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

Committee members would not comment on these reportedly vital developments, asserting they had been pledged to silence on the whole subject, but two members agreed that the resolution would be forthcoming in short order.

Bar to Debate Lifted

It was learned that President Roosevelt had told several Senators yesterday that he saw no objection to throwing open the question of postwar aims for full Senate debate at this time.

Previously Connally had stated that the success of the war effort might be endangered if certain Senators seized the opportunity to criticize postwar aims of the United Nations, such as Great Britain's toward India, and Russia's toward Poland.

Some sources ascribed the committee change of heart to this reported blessing from the White House.

In other quarters yesterday the whole idea of new developments making it possible to discuss a postwar resolution now in unlimited debate was scouted. Several Senators maintained that pressure from many sources was responsible for Connally's statement that the committee was preparing and would report a resolution.

The following main pressure points were listed:

1. Passage of the Fulbright resolution by the House in a vote of 360 to 29.

2. Announcement by Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota that he and his cosponsors of the B2H2 resolution, Senators Burton (Republican) of Ohio, Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico and Hill (Democrat) of Alabama would bring in a motion to discharge the Foreign Relations Committee from its postwar resolution study if action did not take place within three weeks.

Republicans' Plans

3. Determination of leading Republican strategists to force a postwar resolution settlement this year, divorcing it from campaign consideration, so they could concentrate on domestic issues next year.

4. Approval from the White House.

Warm defenders of Connally and his committee scouted reports that pressure forced action. They pointed out that admittedly the B2H2 bloc could not force dis-

Patient Morale, Medical Care Called Excellent at Gallinger

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

The morale of patients in the tuberculosis ward at Gallinger Hospital was characterized yesterday as "excellent" and the quality of medical care as "very good" by Dr. William F. Ossenfort, assistant surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, at a hearing before a Senate District subcommittee investigating the institution.

"I spent a full day in the ward, talked to 50 or more patients, and sensed that their morale was excellent and cheerful and the attitude of the staff outstanding," Dr. Ossenfort said.

"Did you ask any of them if they had been among the 149 signers of the petition protesting against insanitary conditions there?" asked Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota, who quizzed the witnesses.

"No, I didn't mention the petition to them," he replied.

He was particularly impressed, he said, with the enthusiasm and interest of the physicians, although he found the quantity of medical care is "not what it should be."

"Gallinger has a high rate of turnover in personnel, which is true in all hospitals of the Nation at this time," he pointed out. "However, I met several physicians there who are old friends of mine, and they told me that the quality of care is superior to that found in other hospitals they had worked in before."

He asserted that the hospital was "remarkably clean under the circumstances," attributing the difficulties in maintaining cleanliness to the shortage of help.

"Modern structures should replace the present outmoded buildings at the earliest possible date, and routine chest examinations and X-rays should be given periodically to all nurses," he recommended.

The appearance on the stand of Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock, postponed from day to day ever sihce the hearings commenced Monday because of the length of testimony from other witnesses, received another setback yesterday as Senator Buck (Republican) of Delaware, presiding officer, adjourned the meeting until 10 a. m. today. The afternoon session will begin at 2 p. m., and Dr. Bocock's testimony is expected to take up much of the day.

Yesterday's hearing, least stormy of the three that have taken place this week, marked the reappearance of Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief psychiatrist and alienist, who came armed with files to refute letters of complaint read by Bushfield the day before.

Dr. Gilbert also brought a set of the leather cuffs or wristlets which, he admitted Tuesday, were

Crowley Says He'll Brook No Interference

New OFEA 'Entirely' Out of State Dept., Director Stresses

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Leo T. Crowley made clear in an interview yesterday that he intends to have a free hand in his operation of the new office of Foreign Economic Administration, although he will cooperate with appropriate Government departments to fulfill his presidential assignment.

This declaration of policy was made in a discussion of the exact nature and proposed functions of OFEA which President Roosevelt established last Saturday, simultaneously with the appointment of Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., as Undersecretary of State.

Crowley particularly stressed that OFEA is "entirely" out of the State Department. This, he added, means that the State Department will not have the right to interfere with the operations of his agency.

To Steer Clear of Policy-Making

"But the executive order calls for me to work within the framework of State Department foreign policy," he pointed out, adding that he would not attempt to do anything important with foreign governments without first checking with President Roosevelt or Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

"I will not attempt to have a foreign policy of my own," he explained. "My end is operating and administering, while policy-making is for the President and Secretary Hull to determine."

The white-haired administrator conceded that the wide ramifications of OFEA will undoubtedly influence this Nation's foreign policy —by the sheer importance and comprehensiveness of the agency's functions.

No "Big Names" to Be Brought In

Crowley, who nurtured both the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the office of the Alien Property Custodian into successful operation, strongly indicated that OFEA also would bring "business thought" into the Administration He apparently had in mind recurrent criticisms that the Administration, particularly the State Department, had

D.C. 18 Million Behind Quota In Loan Drive

Three Days Left For District to Attain War Goal

Purchase of an $18.75 bond by every Washingtonian between now and Saturday when the Third War Loan Drive ends will insure the District quota of 94 million dollars.

Here's the plan in cold figures for the job yet to be done:

Total bond sales announced yesterday amounted to $75,700,000 or 80.5 per cent of the city's quota. During the next three days the remaining $18,300,000 must be raised.

On the assumption the population equals a million persons, it is simple to figure that an $18.75 investment by everyone will carry the bond bombs deep into enemy territory.

Despite this week's slump in local sales the national total of 15 billion dollars was within 261 million dollars of success last night. The Treasury reported an additional 514 million dollars in bond sales to send the total to $14,739,000,000.

Next door, Maryland continued to lead the Nation with 133 per cent of its quota of $196,000,000

Court Is Lenient With Underpaid Bank Embezzlers

Newark, N. J., Sept. 29 (AP).—Federal Judge William F. Smith said today he would make it a practice to deal leniently with bank employes who received "inadequate pay" and were brought before him on embezzlement charges.

He suspended sentence of a year and a day on John J. Kling, former assistant cashier in the First National Bank of South Plainfield, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzling $2127, and placed him on probation for three years.

"I'm not condoning such offenses," Judge Smith asserted, "but merely commenting on the banking system that prevails where bankers lack foresight and pay big salaries to those in the front offices and inadequate pay to men raising families and working in lower positions in banking institutions."

War Will Continue Until 1945, Warn Senators Back From Tour

Three globe-girdling Senators back from a 40,000-mile air tour of U. S. war fronts warned yesterday that while the collapse of Germany might come at any moment the war will not be over until 1945, if then.

Senators Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, Mead (Democrat) of New York and Brewster (Republican) of Maine held a joint conference touching on 11 conclusions from the tour, on which they were accompanied by Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky and Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts.

Russell, chairman of the group, said he will ask the Senate leadership to schedule an executive session so that several of his major points could be developed fully in confidence to the Senate.

Among those major questions touched on at the press conference were:

1. The necessity of planning now for postwar development, including immediate consideration of the civil government of Germany when it collapses in order to avoid chaos in the whole area in and around Germany. Much remains to be done in this respect, the group agreed.

2. Development of congressional policy in the conservation of petroleum reserves. Mead, a member of the Truman Committee, declared that in the Western Hemisphere the United States has only 25 per cent of the petroleum reserves, but that this country is

A comprehensive substitute for the Wheeler no-fathers'-draft bill was being whipped into shape last night by a bipartisan group of Senators, as leaders abandoned hope for Senate draft action before tomorrow's start of father inductions.

The substitute move, aimed at scaling down Government and industrial deferments and exhausting the list of childless eligibles on a national basis before fathers are called, seemed headed for leadership opposition.

Rather than further complicate the already involved draft dilemma, leaders may move at the first opportunity to send the Wheeler bill and all amendments and substitutes back to committee for indefinite interment.

Barkley Discounts Report

Senate Majority Leader Barkley last night told reporters there is "a lot of smoke, but very little fire, in this talk of a mysterious army of Government employes hiding from the draft."

He disclosed that War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt today will make available to the Senate draft status statistics for Government agencies.

"They certainly don't show we are exempting a lot of Federal employes who ought to be in the war," Barkley said. "In the War Department, for example, out of 36,000 civilian employes in Washington between the ages 18 and 37,

U. S. Fliers Blast Main Jap Supply; Big Fires Set by 145 Tons of Bombs

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Thursday), Sept. 30.—American bombers smashed again at the Japanese base at Wewak, New Guinea, and destroyed a large munitions depot there, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

Pilots who took part in the long-range aerial assault said they started the largest explosions ever witnessed in the Southwest Pacific.

In addition to the destruction of vital munition dumps, the bombers also touched off large fuel supplies and counted eight towering fires as they left for their home bases.

The communique said 145 tons of bombs were dropped on the enemy's northeast New Guinea base, a heavy day's work for that area.

Move Nearer Finschhafen

On the land side, Australian troops battered their way through fixed Japanese defenses to move within 600 yards of the main jetty at Finschhafen, Japanese shipping base overlooking their more important bases at New Britain.

The advance was the first reported for days after the Australian veterans ran into typical Japanese pillbox and machine gun emplacements.

The raid against Wewak was not without stiff opposition. The bombers smashed into a defending force of 40 Japanese fighters, destroyed eight of them and probably destroyed three others. No Allied planes were lost although some were damaged.

Their aerial victory added new gains to the imposing list of plane losses inflicted on the Japanese there, the losses now mounting far in excess of 400.

Pounding at Air Base

This raid on the enemy's operational base 325 miles up the coast from the present ground-fighting scene followed quickly another on Monday, in which more than 60 planes were destroyed and seven ships of a newly arrived convoy were sunk.

General MacArthur termed the Wewak raid, in which fleet P-38 Lightning fighters protected our heavy bombers, a continuation of the campaign to "deny the enemy the use of his air bases."

The munitions dump, it is believed, was the chief munitions dump for all Japanese forces in New Guinea. It was located half-

Foe in Retreat

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 29.—The American Fifth Army raced tonight to within a few miles of ravaged Naples and was expected to enter the terrorized city at any moment after driving the Germans into full flight across the coastal plains near Mount Vesuvius with strong armored forces.

(Allied troops have advanced into the suburbs of Naples and are battling the Germans there, the International News Service quoted an American news commentator on the Algiers radio as saying.)

Castellammare, the naval base 15 miles from Naples, and the whole Sorrento Peninsula flanking the Bay of Naples to the south were in Allied hands.

The stout mountain defenses north of Salerno, in which the Germans for six days gave ground grudgingly in the face of continuous attacks, sagged suddenly early yesterday and then were overrun, headquarters announced.

Clark Throws in Tanks

The victorious army of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark then rolled down on the Naples plains. He threw into battle his tanks and mobile artillery, which had been almost useless in the last week of mountain fighting.

He was racing tonight for the smoking and exploding city of 925,000 persons. Rome and Milan are the only larger Italian cities.

The Germans were in swift, orderly retreat, which may not end until they reach the Volturno River line, 20 miles north of Naples and almost due west of the great Foggia air center across the peninsula, which fell with its virtually intact airfields Monday.

"The enemy's defensive ring around Naples is broken," a military spokesman declared.

(The British Press Association said the Allies had entered Pompeii, the city at the foot of Vesuvius 12 miles southeast of Naples, which the volcano destroyed in 79 A. D.

(The German radio acknowledged that Castel San Giorgio and Baronissi, 23 and 24 miles southeast of Naples, had been evacuated and that American reinforcements had landed. The German communique said that, despite continuous rain and "difficult road conditions, our own movements took their anticipated course.")

Eighth Army Driving

The crackup of German resistance was accompanied by sharp gains by American troops farther inland and by the British Eighth Army near the Adriatic coast.

The British wiped out a deep salient in the mountainous center, establishing a straight line between San Angelo, 45 miles east of Naples, and captured Melfi, 17 miles farther east. (Radio Algiers said San Angelo was captured.)

Along the Adriatic, the British drove without substantial opposition 12 miles north of Margherita di Savoia and occupied the fishing port of Zapponeto on the Gulf of Manfredonia, due east of Foggia.

Castellammare, a city of 45,000 with naval facilities capable of handling 330-foot ships, fell quickly.

The break-through was at the extreme western end of the front,

Milk Subsidy Plan Assailed; Dairymen Warn of Crisis Here

Fauquier Farmers Predict Scarcity Under Present Setup

By Kurt Kelman
Post Staff Writer

Dairymen of nearby Fauquier County, Va., which supplies about 10 per cent of Washington's milk needs, asserted yesterday that only an increase in the milk price paid to farmers from 8.6 cents a quart to 10 cents would prevent a major production crisis in the Washington milkshed.

Written after a tour of the dairying area, this is frankly the farmer's side of the story.

Painting a dire picture of the milk situation and predicting a probable drop of production within a few months of more than 30 per cent, the dairymen declare that the recent drought had made "a situation, which had been bad since lend-lease started, intolerable."

"Ever since lend-lease began depleting the country's feed supply, the dairymen have had to pay so much for their feed that producing milk has become a total loss," Paul R. Marsh, a spokesman of the Catlett-Calverton Ruritan Club, said yesterday.

"Now that we have to buy nearly all our feed, due to the drought, we simply cannot continue this way. If the city folks want milk, they'll have to pay for it," he added.

Denying that any "milk strike" was planned, Marsh disclosed that a stoppage of milk delivery for, "let's say three days," has been

'Government by Fear'

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In angry protest against the Government's plan for granting subsidy payments to dairy producers in lieu of an increase in the price of milk, the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation last night declared consumers who want this type of "relief" should shoulder the stigma connected with it.

"Farmers do not desire such payments. They seek only fair prices, the federation asserted in a policy statement developed during a two-day meeting and read to more than 150 Congressmen attending a dinner conference with the group at the Statler Hotel.

Through its insistence on use of subsidies, the dairy leaders charged, the Administration is developing "an elaborate scheme of interlocking controls" calling for the exercise of policing powers "not contemplated by exisiting law."

"Thus Government by regulation is constantly supplanting Government by law; and Government by regulation rapidly emerges into Government by fear," the state-

Adroit Attack By Japs Sinks U. S. Transport

Troops Unloaded At Guadalcanal Before Air Foray

By Leif Erickson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Guadalcanal (Delayed).—The large Navy transport U. S. S. John Penn was torpedoed and sunk in a smartly executed new style Japanese torpedo plane attack on supply ships off Guadalcanal.

Hit squarely amidships, the transport in a few minutes was flaming from bow to stern. It sank in a short time, but flaming oil on the water lighted the area while landing boats sped out from the beach to pick up survivors.

Luckily, the unloading of troops and cargo from the ship—former American Export Lines Excambion —had been completed in the afternoon. Casualties among the crew were reported light.

(An Allied headquarters communique last Friday announced the loss of the John Penn.)

This was the way the enemy executed the attack:

Three or more high altitude bombers first came in over Guadalcanal from the west or inshore side. Searchlights, antiaircraft and night fighters all concentrated on them.

With attention of defenses diverted, a torpedo plane swooped in low over the channel. It was not detected until it was making its run on the transport in bright moonlight.

Antiaircraft guns opened fire, but did not hit the plane before it

Russians Take Dnieper Island Close to Kiev

Another Red Column Pushes Half-Way From Smolensk to Vitebsk

By the Associated Press

Moscow, (Thursday), Sept. 30.—Onrushing Soviet troops drove into a Dnieper River island a little more than a quarter of a mile from the gun-studded hills of Kiev, Moscow announced today.

Far to the north, the Red army advanced half way from Smolensk to Vitebsk by capturing the town of Rudnya, on the 80-mile railway line between these two cities. Despite rain-soaked roads, the Russians pushed ahead more than nine miles, killing 1000 Germans, occupying 120 towns and hamlets, and putting the Red army 110 miles from the Polish border. Farther to the north, the Russians already were somewhat closer to that objective.

Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin, in one of two orders of the day, called Rudnya, 10 miles from the northern border of White Russia, on the rail line that leads to Riga, "a powerful enemy stronghold and a center of communications in the Vitebsk direction."

At Kiev the Russians burst out through German defense lines to capture the bridgehead fortifications of Trukhanov Island, a river bastion directly in front of central Kiev. The river is 1400 feet wide at this point.

In that advance the Russians also captured Darnitsa, 9 miles east of Kiev, after several days fighting. The communique said they killed

'Pure Dictatorship'

Court Holds OPA Has No Right To Order Business Suspensions

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 29.—Federal Judge W. H. Atwell ruled today that the OPA's business suspension system is unconstitutional and described the administrator who issued suspension orders as "a modern instance of pure dictatorship."

The regional Office of Price Administration said the decision would be appealed.

Atwell held that the OPA had legal authority to ration gasoline and other commodities, but ruled that such authority did not include the power to suspend violators from their rights to deal in the rationed commodities.

He granted the petition of Amos F. and Foy O. Wilemon, operators of the Good Luck Service Co., for an injunction restraining the OPA from enforcing a two-week shutdown order against their seven gasoline service stations.

Judge Atwell said:

"The (OPA) hearing administrator, unknowon to and unprovided for by the Congress, presumes to conduct a court.

"He acts without fear of consequences for malfeasance or misfeasance. If he can suspend for two weeks, he can suspend for two years. Foe Reduces Naples To City of Horrors

Refugees Report Ravages by Germans; Women and Children Machine-Gunned

By Don Whitehead
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States Navy in the Gulf of Salerno, Sept. 28, (Delayed). — The once beautiful port of Naples is now a ravaged city of horrors.

Desperate German troops—ruling the tortured city by terrorism—are spreading destruction, machine-gunning women and children and forcing soldiers and civilians alike into slave labor battalions with death for those who refuse.

This is the story brought from Naples by terrified refugees who escaped in fishing boats, risking drowning rather than face the fury of their one-time allies.

Many of the refugees were not so lucky. The Germans tossed hand grenades into their boats as they atempted to slip away from the harbor or machine-gunned the frial craft.

The apparent aim of the Germans, infurated by the Italian armistice with the United Nations on the eve of invasion, is to wreak vengeance on the Italian people and to destroy Naples as much as possible so that nothing of value remains when Allied troops take the city.

The port is rapidly becoming a shambles, refugees say, and harbor facilities are being blasted and burned day and night. Ships are being sunk in an effort to block the harbor entrances, and the waters are mined to delay the Navy's making use of the harbor as a supply base for invasion armies battling to take the city.

Great clouds of smoke drift over the city, and make the smoke pouring from Vesuvius seem a puny effort. The rumble of demolitions is plainly audible on the Island of Capri, which is becoming a haven for hundreds of refugees.

One refugee, who asked that his name be withheld for fear of reprisals against his relatives held by the Germans, told this story:

"There are many bodies of dead Italians lying in the streets of Naples. Some of them were shot down for no reason except that they were walking the streets. I saw a German shoot an Italian soldier who still had a rifle. A young man ran to pick up the rifle and he was killed too.

"I saw a German soldier flip a cigarette into the street. A youth stooped to pick it up and he was shot. There is an absolute reign of terror existing. Food stores are being looted and the people are starving in their homes, afraid to come out on the street.

"The Germans are forcing every ablebodied man to volunter for labor battalions. They are taking them north as pioneer troops and perhaps to force them to work in German factories. These people are becoming nothing more than slave laborers.

"A few days after the armistice some of the troops fought the Germans in Naples, but they had little ammunition, since the Germans controlled the supplies. The Germans soon overpowered them."

Allied bobings smashed most of the harbor facilities, sank many ships in the gulf and alongside the docks, and battered the railway terminals. What the planes did not destroy the Germans are trying to finish, and from all reports they are setting the torch to many nonmilitary buildings, such as the Naples Opera House.

Great fires are burning in the southern part of the city, where the Germans blasted a torpedo factory, the military arsenal, gas works, engineering works and many oil storage centers around the railway yards.

Obviously, Naple's primary value to the Allies is in its large harbor. Since the invasion, all troops, armor, guns and supplies have been moved across the beaches in the Gulf of Salerno by shallow draft amphibious operations vessels. Once Naples harbor is seized, deep draft vessels can unload cargoes at the docks, speeding up the flow of supplies and material to the Army.

Food Situation Called Bad

The food situation in Naples is acute. No supplies are moving into the metropolis from the farms, where there are abundant harvests of grapes, apples, peaches, nuts and vegetables.

Disease has broken out among the malnourished people to increase the fear and misery. Many refugees arriving at Capri are being segregated for fear disease will spread to the little playground islands. The influx of 100 to 200 persons each day is putting a strain on Capri's slender food resources.

The refugees arrive with only small bundles and valuables, 15 or 20 persons crowded into a small boat. Fortunately the waters in the gulf have been placid, or many of the boats would have capsized while crossing to Capri.

Italians Fleeing Naples

Many Italians in civilian clothes are escaping from Naples through the mountains, slipping through the German lines and trudging along dusty roads to the south, trying to hitch rides on Army vehicles. Some of them are Sicilians trying to make their way home from points as far north as Genoa and La Spezia.

There is a veritable army straggling southward, taking handouts from Americans or living on the charity of farmers along the way. Those in the ragged army carry their belongings in knapsacks and beg food and cigarettes from American troops.

The troops bear their former enemies no ill will and instead regard them more as a nuisance than anything else.

A tremendous job lies ahead for the Allied military government of occupied territories when the Allies enter Naples, for AMG will have the responsibility of bringing order out of the chaos of destruction, fear and hunger into which Naples has been plunged.

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

U. S. Patrol Kills 12 Japs, Eats Their Meal

By the Associated Press

United States Army Headquarters in the South Pacific.—Seven American soldiers during the New Georgia campaign wiped out a nest of 12 Japanese, and then calmly sat down and ate the hot meal which the enemy had prepared.

As the men went into "no man's land" they noticed Japanese activity at a command post, and immediately began to storm it.

Pvt. George Conway of Cadiz, Ohio, started the action by beating a nervous Japanese to the draw—a tommy gun against a Japanese knee mortar. Staff Sergt. Carl Koppler of Ashland, Ohio, joined Conway and Sergt. Earl Hawkins of Frametown, W. Va., in a fox hole.

Then Pvt. Paige Dowe of Arnoldsburg, W. Va., circled to the protection of a fallen log as the Japanese captain of the group fired with a pistol. The pistol jammed after the first shot, and shortly thereafter Dowe killed the enemy officer.

Sgt. Arthur Pichey of Steubenville, Ohio, and Pvt. Paul Pickenhouse of Carlyle, Ill., fired continuously with Browning automatic weapons, while Pvt. Wayne Brice of Houston, Tex., sniped at Japanese who showed their heads. Then the Americans began tossing hand grenades into the three Japanese foxholes. A few minutes later, the action was over.

The Americans, none of whom was injured, counted 12 dead Japanese, including the captain and a lieutenant.

But what pleased the soldiers most was the presence of cooked rice, fish, beef and crackers. The Japanese had just taken time off for their noon meal.

It was the first hot meal the Americans had enjoyed since the opening of the campaign for the Munda airfield.

Germans Mine Air Base; Trap Own Machines

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 29.—Fearful of an Allied break-through to Naples, the Germans mined the runways at the Capodichino airfield 3 miles north of the city even before their own serviceable planes were able to take off, an Italian air officer who escaped from the city said today.

This officer told Allied air officials that as a result of this action "there are dozens of machines—giant six-engined Messerschmitt 323 transports, many Junkers 52's, Junkers 88's and Messerschmitt 110's at Capodichino." He added, "The ground is holed with craters which the Germans have not attempted to fill in. They preferred to burn the remaining aircraft."

At the even larger and better equipped Pomigliano airport, 12 miles northeast of Naples, this report continued, "many German aircraft have been caught on the ground by bombs, and the perimeter is a regular scrap heap of German aircraft and wrecked engines and fusigales."

At both fields the hangars are gutted, and the Alfa-Romeo factory near Pomigliano, where the Daimler-Benz and other plane and auto engines once were produced for both German and Italian armies, also is in ruins.

The Italian officer reported that a number of Italian aircraft works had been placed in tunnels under Naples, and therefore escaped damage from Allied bombings. He said that these now had been demolished by the Germans and that the enemy was destroying other factories, including those manufacturing clothing and cosmetics.

Invasion Held Only Hope For Greece Before Winter

Istanbul, Sept. 28 (AP).—(Delayed)—Unless the Allies invade Greece before winter sets in and bring large-scale relief, the country's population, especially the middle classes, will be threatened with extinction from malnutrition and starvation, a former official of the Athens Government said today.

This report was made by Konstantin Sbarounas, until recently general secretary of the Ministry of Finance in the Athens Government, to the United States Greek Relief Representative in Turkey.

Italian Fleet Proves Tough Allied Problem

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 29.—Disposal of the Italian fleet is developing into one of the knottiest political questions of the war.

So far the Italians have been allowed to keep their warships, which are admitted to be of great value to the Allies, but they have shown little inclination to fight, in the Mediterranean or anywhere else.

The French, on the other hand, have pointed out to the United States and Britain that they have a reserve officer and sailor pool of 25,000 men willing to fight aboard the ships, either here or in the Pacific.

This situation frames one of the questions which undoubtedly will be taken up by the Mediterranean commission the Allies are establishing.

The Dutch, the Greeks and the Norwegians, all of whom lost their fleets fighting on the side of the Allies, also have reserve pools of sailors.

Small Ships Soon Ready

It would take considerable time to train crews to take over the battleships, but the small cruisers and destroyers, which are urgently needed by the Allies, could be put into action quickly.

There is little inclination on the part of the Allied chiefs to trust the Italian warships with the duty of guarding important Allied troop convoys from air or undersea attacks.

But the great speed of the Italian warships would make them especially valuable in the Pacific. Most of the Italian warships now are idle, although a few destroyers are going about on missions.

In some military minds there may be doubt that the Italians are valuable enough in a military way to justify the shipping space the United Nations have allotted them to keep them in the war.

The Italians already have requested that they be supplied with clothing for 300,000 persons, including troops who attacked Albania and Greece and have been stationed there, but now, disarmed by the Germans, have been returned to Italy.

Partial Status as Ally

By John F. Chester
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 29.—A chance for at least a limited reprieve for Italy from the status of a defeated aggressor nation was seen here tonight following disclosure that Italian ships and troops already are working in the American-British service.

Thus far, it is understood here, Italy definitely has been classed as a defeated enemy, but there is concrete basis for the belief that she will be given an opportunity to alter her status provided she collaborates fully with the Allies.

Whether Italy will be asked actually to declare war on Germany is a question that cannot be answered categorically in London tonight, but such an act was believed possible.

May Be Cobelligerent

Edward Kennedy, Associated Press correspondent with the Allied forces in Italy, said in a dispatch that "it now seems possible Italy may be accorded the status of a cobelligerent, and that any concessions she may receive will be measured by the aid she delivers."

This correspondent pointed out, however, that there are difficulties barring granting of "anything even approaching United Nations status."

"One," said Kennedy, "is the reluctance of the troops who have been fighting the Italians to accept them as Allies."

Yugoslav Army Fights in Germany

Action, Aided by Hungarians, Austrians, Czechs Is First Invasion of Reich

By Thomas C. Watson
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Sept. 29.—Partisan warriors of the Yugoslav Army of Liberation were revealed today to have slashed their way across the Yugoslav-German frontier in the first Allied invasion of Adolf Hitler's greater Reich.

At the same time, young King Peter II of Yugoslavia, who was 20 on September 6, arrived in Cairo with the Yugoslav government in exile.

Like the exile regime of King George II of Greece, Peter has moved from London to await the liberation of his homeland by Allied invasion or Yugoslav patriots or both.

The British radio quoted a Swiss broadcast to the effect that the Yugoslav partisans not only have crossed the frontier into Italy but have also driven into German territory as well. BBC added:

"Near Murska Sobota, the broadcast says, the partisans have entered the territory of the Reich, and during this operation they were supported by units of Austrian partisans, Czech battalions and Hungarian units bearing the insignia of the famous Hungarian freedom flag."

The same British broadcast said the Swiss radio also announced that the Yugoslav liberation army had won possession of Costanzi, capital of Croatia, from the Nazis.

(The Swiss radio, in a broadcast heard by the FCC, declared Yugoslav partisans had taken the town of Gacko in Herzegovina. The broadcast added that street fighting still was raging in Susak, a suburb of the Italian port of Fiume at the top of the Adriatic.)

But while the Yugoslavs scored these successes, othe. patriot forces were forced to evacuate the Dalmatian Port of Split (Spalato) "after heavy fighting."

The Yugoslavs, however, still were reported engaged in fierce fighting near Split, where Nazi pressure had been considerably increased during the last few days.

Before giving up the Dalmatian port, the Yugoslavs succeeded in evacuating all war materials that had been stored there.

The capture of the great Italian air base of Foggia near the Adriatic by the Allies should be a substantial boon to the Yugoslav guerilla warriors. Split is just under 150 miles from Foggia and presumably will be an early objective of Allied warplanes once the Foggia base is ready for use.

Pacific Council Sees President

Members of the Pacific War Council, representing the nations actively engaged in the war in the Pacific, met with President Roosevelt yesterday and said they reviewed the general situation in that theater.

Sir Ronald Campbell, British charge d'affaires, told newsmen "it looked all right."

How can ALL-BRAN'S amazing results be explained—when so many other methods fail? Scientists say it's because ALL-BRAN is a rich source of cellulosic elements—lack of which is a common cause of constipation. '1-Man Army' Stops 100 Japs

By William Hipple
Associated Press Staff Writer

U. S. Army Headquarters in the South Pacific—Sergt. James Burgess of Lakewood, Ohio, is the newest one-man army of the South Pacific.

Burgess single-handedly attacked a Japanese force of about 100 men, killed an estimated 20 and broke up an attack on a beachhead during the New Georgia campaign.

Corpl. Andrew Genzoli of Ferndale, Calif., an Army public relations man who reported the exploit, said Burgess volunteered to man a machine gun outpost protecting a beachhead supply dump.

It was not uncommon for a large enemy force to penetrate the front lines and filter to the rear to disturb any installations they might find.

One night, an estimated force of 100 Japanese approached the beachhead. Burgess was forced to take over in his foxhole shortly before an enemy scout approached. The Japanese probed Burgess' hole with a bayonet, almost touching him.

As soon as the Japanese soldier went far enough away, Burgess put his machine-gun into action. He cut into the main body, dispersing the greater portion of them, killing an estimated 20, and putting an end to the attack on the beachhead.

The retreating Japanese, however, had cut off Burgess' position.

His machine-gun was now out of order and he was forced to leave the foxhole and circle around the Japanese.

Because of the route the fleeing Japanese had taken, Burgess had to circle wide on a solitary jungle trip of four days. Given up for missing in action, he returned to his base on the fourth day.

Three times he had to swim to nearby islands to keep from being discovered. He finally returned to the United States position.

Sforza Visions Unofficial Job Fighting Nazis

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 29.—Count Carlo Sforza, noted Italian anti-Fascist, indicated tonight he would return to Italy to help "defeat the Nazi danger" but, he added, "I will be more useful for that purpose out of government than inside any government."

He told the Associated Press in a statement which he declined to amplify:

"It is evident that I consider it the first duty of all Italians to join in the common struggle to defeat the Nazi danger in Italy.

Sforza declined to comment upon a report yesterday by the Algiers radio that he had messaged Marshal Pietro Badoglio that he was ready to offer "full support" to the present Italian government as long as it continued its efforts to defeat the Germans. However, Countess Sforza said yesterday that any such report was "absolutely incorrect."

VFW Votes Against Admitting Women

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 29.—Delegates to the 1943 convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars voted emphatically late today against taking service women into their organization.

The vote came after more than three hours of the most heated wrangling yet to mark the conclave, which has accepted or turned down several other measures in almost routine fashion.

Today's vote was on an amendment to the VFW's by-laws which would have permitted nurses and members of the various service auxiliaries who have served overseas to apply for membership. It was the first time since organization of the VFW in 1899 that any such proposal has been made. It first was suggested by the VFW Department of Idaho, and was presented today by the by-laws committee.

Several times it appeared the meeting would get out of hand as the almost 3000 delegates shouted their sentiments. The "no's" finally won by a substantial margin and a roll call count showed 2070 delegates in favor of tabling the amendment for one year, against only 826 who favored immediate action.

Typical comments included: Otto Silvers of Detroit, member of the VFW National Council: "If we got enough women in, I suppose we would then have to have VFW auxiliaries for husbands!"

W. T. Suplier of Holidays Cove, W. Va.: "We've done pretty well without women for 40 years and I guess we can get along without them from now on."

Most support for letting ladies into the VFW came from New Jersey and Ohio delegates.

England Faces $2.5 Billion Building Plan

Bomb-ravished England faces a $2,500,000,000 postwar home building program, contemplating five million new family structures over a 10-year period and not including replacement or rebuilding of damaged business structures in her great cities, costs of which will mount to astronomical proportions.

But, there will be no governmental subsidies as aids to this tremendous reconstruction task.

These two salient points were made yesterday by Alfred C. Bossom, British M. P. and head of the British Ministry of Works and Planning Mission, now in the United States to study American architectural and building technics with a view to incorporating our technics in the British reconstruction task.

Giving credit to Hitler for having saved London the expense of clearing the slum sections of that city, Bossom, a fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects, painted a pretty picture of postwar England.

Study of the best means of development of water power in the Scottish highlands to make electricity more available to English masses, district heating stations from which warm air would be piped to hundreds of homes; electric cooking facilities, interior color schemes and conveniences to enhance English living, were among objectives sought in the mission's American tour, he said.

"Emphasis," he said, "will be on interiors, rather than exteriors. Since one out of every five English homes have been bombed and damaged, the general external architecture of England insists that a general exterior harmony be maintained, but we hope to return with ideas to make the British home as colorful as those in America."

The M. P. drew a laugh when he suggested a declining birth rate could be halted by making for home happiness among the English. There was, he said diffidently, "some sort of relation between comfortable living and the birth rate."

There'll be no skyscrapers in postwar London, he said, pointing out that England, lying low on the earth's surface, received sunlight at angles instead, as in America, receiving it vertically.

Somewhat moodily, Bossom admitted that air-raid shelters would be a permanent part of English building, but speculated on the ultimate end of such building, saying "bombs nowadays go down 50 and more feet. It's not inconceivable they'll go down 200 feet."

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

Takoma Park Flier Is Nazi Prisoner, Parents Informed

Parents of Second Lieut. Robert J. Coffman, 23, of 303 Philadelphia ave., Takoma Park, Md., have received word from the Wr Department that their son, previously listed as missing in action, is active and a prisoner in Germany.

COFFMAN

A graduate of Central High School in Washington, Lieutenant Coffman joined the Canadian Royal Air Force in September, 1941. Shortly after his arrival in England last fall, he joined the United States Army Air Force.

He was officially reported missing in August, but this week, through the American Red Cross and the War Department, he was reported a prisoner.

War Sidelights

Gunner Downs 8 Planes of Foe, But Flunks at Base School

At a United States bomber base in Britain, Sept. 29 (AP).—Technical Sergt. Thomas Dye, of Steubenville, Ohio, flunked out of air gunnery school. The official reason was that he had an "unskilled shooting eye."

It was a laugh, too, for at the time Dye had two enemy planes to his credit.

Dye had trained in the United States as a radio operator, but when his fortress, the "Snow Ball," was without a ball turret gunner one day he volunteered.

In five missions he got two German fighters, and then they sent him to gunnery school for a "refresher" on a course he never had taken originally.

The instructors paid no attention to his record, and so he was flunked out for the "unskilled shooting eye."

So Dye quietly went back to the "Snow Ball" and up to today he has shot down eight enemy planes and wears the distinguished Flying Cross and Three Clusters with the air medal.

Nazis Restrict Coal

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—The British radio said today that severe restrictions had been placed on the use of coal throughout Germany.

As reported by United States Government monitors, the broadcast said no public buildings in Germany except hospitals will be heated this winter. No coal will be released for heating private houses until a date to be announced.

Nelson Views Urgency

London, Sept. 29 (AP).—After a tour of an aircraft factory in the Midlands, where Spitfires are being made, Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board in the United States, declared, "There is a great sense of urgency here. That is the message I shall take back to America."

Pope Resumes Audiences

London, Sept. 29 (AP).—The Swiss radio said tonight that Pope Pius XII resumed his usual audiences today at Vatican City.

840-Mile Speed Made in Dive

American Fighter Base, Somewhere in England, Sept. 29 (AP).—Second Lieut. Robert H. Knapp of Norwich, N. Y., was believed today to have achieved a speed of approximately 840 miles per hour in a dive during an air fight over Emden, Germany, last Monday while escorting Fortresses.

The greatest speed previously officially recorded in a P-47 Thunderbolt was "more than 780 miles an hour," which is the speed of sound.

Lieutenant Knapp went down from 20,000 feet to attack a Focke-Wulf 190.

When his P-47 achieved a speed so great that the "paint curled on his elevators," and his controls locked, Knapp thought he was doomed, he reported to fellow officers of his command. But at 5000 feet the plane came out of its vertical dive, and Knapp was able to regain control.

Yarns you'll long remember

Remember old Cap'n John, up Gloucester way? And how folks would listen goggle-eyed as he'd spin his whopping yarns? Yes, New England's yarns bear treasured memories. Some, like Cap'n John's, as gossamer as salt spray. Others, quite different, as sturdy as the Pilgrim fathers. Matter of fact, you yourself actually own some of this more enduring kind—if you're wearing a Bond suit! For you, sir, have a long-lasting share of rock-ribbed New England spinning—woolen and worsted yarns that have no peer, the length and breadth of this country! Here are suitings—100% pure wool—that thrive out on the firing line. Here are pedigreed fabrics that for 35 years have been the very backbone of Bond's ever-growing popularity. Here, again, are those yarns you'll long remember—the self-same New England ruggedness that always wins friends and holds them. Today, it's an achievement to present such superior fabrics—and a joy to wear them. Particularly at these ever-modest Bond prices, which now represent a new peak of intrinsic value.

Aircraft Leaders Ask Incentive Pay

Manufacturers Say Plan Would Boost Their Production 25 Per Cent

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Leaders of the aircraft industry indicated yesterday that they favored introduction of incentive pay plans wherever feasible, with one manufacturer estimating that general adoption of incentive wage schemes would boost airplane production about 25 per cent.

At an unusual joint press conference attended by heads of fifteen East and West Coast airplane firms, reporters were told by Lawrence D. Bell, president of Bell Aircraft Corp., "It appears that the industry wants to work out its problems with labor, rather than through a national conscription act."

All present agreed that labor turnover was their No. 1 problem, with some forecasting that the industry would expand its output the required 50 per cent next year only if its manpower difficulties are solved.

Force of 2,500,000 Planned

It was revealed that the entire aircraft industry including its subcontractors now employ almost two million workers, with peak schedules next spring calling for a total work force between 2,400,000 and 2,500,000.

To expand by the required 400,000 to 500,000, making allowances for the present rate of turnover, the industry belives that it will have to hire 1,700,000 additional workers, officials said.

L. C. Goad, vice president of the Eastern aircraft division of the General Motors Corp., championed incentive wage plans. He explained that his company had used incentive pay plans, but were forced to abandon them because of the many changes being made in aircraft design, forcing continual changes in the incentive pay standards.

"We are hopeful for some equitable way of reintroducing incentive plans," he said. "We think that a good gain in production would be 25 per cent with the proper kind of an incentive plan."

Plan To Meet Objections

Goad pointed out that labor unions have objected to the adoption of incentive plans because they are subject to abuse, but expressed the opinion that these objections could be met by the adoption of methods of measuring the increased production "closely related to the job so that the workman knows what he has earned."

Guy W. Vaughan, president of Curtiss-Wright Corp., said that an incentive plan in his airplane division boosted efficiency from 70 per cent of normal to 130 per cent at a time when plane designs were somewhat frozen. Changes in plane design forced the abandonment of incentives in the airplane division, but the plan was retained in the motors division, he said.

LaMotte T. Cohu, president of the Northrop Aircraft Co., Inc., stated that difficulties with wage stabilization were contributing to labor turnover. He complained that the present wage structure in force in southern California by order of the War Labor Board "is lower than the companies as a whole recommended, and I don't think anybody is too happy about it." He said that he has experienced difficulty getting Treasury Department approval for pay increases to supervisory personnel.

Turnover 'Most Serious'

Glenn L. Martin, president of the company that bears his name, declared that "turnover probably is our most serious problem."

He expressed the opinion that the War Manpower Commission hiring-control plan in effect in Baltimore "has not been of appreciable help" in reducing turnover.

Charles T. Leigh, vice president of Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp., noted that many employes have "peace jitters" and are eager to return to peacetime jobs. Cyril Chappellet, vice president of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., commented that the War Department's conference with management and labor which concluded Tuesday "thoroughly convinced all of us that it was no time to lie down."

Asked if the industry is working on plans for a postwar airplane, Bell replied:

"I don't know about the rest, but we're not doing a damned thing about it."

Labor Hoarding Admitted

J. C. Ward, jr., president of Fairchild Engine & Aircraft Corp., acknowledged that the industry might be charged with hoarding labor because "war conditions have made it impossible to operate at peacetime efficiency."

Donald W. Douglas, president of Douglas Aircraft Co., stated that West Coast aircraft production has increased 4260 per cen since January, 1940, while employment has increased 933 per cent.

J. H. (Dutch) Kindelberger, president of North American Aviation, Inc., said that plant labor management committees "are not performing any miracles, but they are working very well." He said that he was generally satisfied with labor relations at North American —much improved since the prewar period when the Government had to use troops to quell a strike at the plant. P. G. Johnson, president of Boeing Aircraft Co., said that he had not been troubled with any "slowdowns on a plant-wide basis."

The aircraft executives came to Washington for the recent War Department conference and have remained for sessions of the National Aircraft War Production Council to which they are affiliated.

People Face War Bravely, Wiley Finds

Senator Alexander Wiley (Republican) of Wisconsin, speaking yesterday before the Lions Club of Washington at the Mayflower, pictured his constituents "back home" as both "deeply concerned with and affected by" the war—"more than Washington can realize."

Aged farmers are trying to keep their farms going in the absence of much-needed manpower; 250,000 Wisconsin men are now in the armed services, the legislator stated. Small businesses have suffered in a way unknown to Washington, where "the bombs of economic warfare have not yet struck," he declared.

Like his fellow Congressman, Senator Wiley said he toured the country fairs, civic clubs and other meeting places, talking to men and women.

"They want to see the war won. But their dollars come hard, and they are worried about wastage. They also want to know what will happen to about 66 million men and women" who will be demobilized from the armed forces and leave war industries when peace comes.

Private Henry Dubenville, a combat convalescent from Walter Reed Hospital, made a bond appeal, and Chairman Jules Ricker announced that $80,000 of the Lions' $100,000 quota in Washington had already been subscribed.

Republicans Sit in Tax Strategy Conference At Invitation of Administration Leaders

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

For the first time in their development of next year's tax plans, Administration leaders yesterday invited ranking Republican tax writers to sit in on a strategy conference at the Treasury.

A chief point in the strategy, it developed, was an agreement among those who attended the conference to give discussion of tax plans a rest until after the bond drive ends this week.

Another development was perceptible easing in the tension that had developed among minority members, and some Democrats, on the Ways and Means Committee over failure of the President and his chief fiscal aides to consult the Republicans on the Administration's preliminary tax plans.

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

Lady Reporters Scare Knutson

These are understood to center on a single proposal to raise 12 billion additional tax dollars, with about two-thirds to come from individuals, a billion from corporations, and 2.5 billion from excises.

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, which expects to receive the Administration tax plan Monday, was one of the visitors to the conference.

He was met on his return to the Capitol by about a dozen reporters, two of them women. He was asked whether he would say what he thought of the reported Administration tax program.

"With these two gals present?" he flashed. "Not on your life!"

Other Republicans who went from the Capitol to the Treasury conference included Senators Vandenberg of Michigan and Taft of Ohio, both members of the Senate Finance Committee, and Representative Reed of New York, a leading member of the Ways and Means Committee.

George, Byrd Attend

Finance Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia and Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, a committee member, also attended, along with Ways and Means Chairman Doughton of North Carolina and Representatives Cooper of Tennessee and Disney of Oklahoma, all Democrats.

Administration officials present were Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, War Mobilization Director Byrnes and Economic Stabilization Director Vinson.

Earlier Chairman Disney of the Ways and Means Subcommittee, studying renegotiation of war contracts, announced that his group had agreed to a six-point plan for changing the present renegotiation law, but had deferred decisions on whether renegotiations should be undertaken before or after payment of taxes and on making allowance for postwar industrial conversion reserves.

The six points of agreement were:

1. No repeal of the renegotiations statute.
2. Provide review in the U. S. Court of Tax Appeals from renegotiations decisions, on questions of fact as well as law.
3. Limit renegotiation to contracts for $500,000 or more, in place of the present $100,000 floor, and apply this proviso retroactively to last January 1.
4. Allow the same business costs in computing income for purposes of renegotiation that are allowed in the tax laws; and permit prorating these cost items between war and civilian business.
5. Allow full amortization deductions, specifically those under five-year amortization plans, as a regular item of cost.
6. In considering amortization, salary contracts for "inordinate" salaries would not be allowable as a cost item.

Standley Presents Report to President

Admiral William H. Standley, United States Ambassador to Russia, made his first report to President Roosevelt yesterday since his return from Moscow. He declined to go into details about his conference.

Standley plans to give up his diplomatic post and W. Averell Harriman, American lend-lease coordinator in London, is being mentioned as his successor.

Child Benefit Move Backed By Army, Navy

By William F. Arbogast
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Army and Navy backed higher Government payments to children of servicemen yesterday, but opposed a boost for childless wives.

Testifying before the House Military Committee, Maj. Gen. Miller G. White also turned thumbs down on a suggestion that payments be withheld from wives who are financially independent, or who prove unfaithful.

White, head of the Army's personnel branch, said the War and Navy Departments generally favored the bill passed by the Senate. This would continue at $50 a month—$28 coming from the Government and $22 from the husband—payment to a wife, but would raise from $12 to $18 the monthly Government payment for the first child and from $10 to $11 that for each additional child.

Army Sidesteps Problem

The question whether a serviceman should be allowed to cut off payments, mandatory under existing law, to his wife if she is unfaithful was raised by Representative Sparkman (Democrat) of Alabama.

White was emphatic that the Army did not want to become involved in questions of "domestic relations."

Frequently, he remarked, "mother-in-law" and others write to servicemen and complain of the actions of wives back home.

White also said he did not believe it would be wise to require the departments to determine whether a wife needed the allotment and allowance, the payments, he explained, were considered a part of a serviceman's remuneration, and no distinction should be made because of financial status.

Payments to Parents

In addition to an increase in payments for children, the general said payments should be raisd for totally dependent parents, brothers and sisters. He favored separating class "B" dependents (those other than wife and children) into two groups, one chiefly dependent, and the other only partly dependent on a serviceman's financial help, with increased payments for those whose chief support comes from a serviceman.

White also favored the Government's paying the entire first month's payment, without any deduction from the serviceman's check, and extending benefits of the act to dependents of all seven grades of enlisted men. Only dependents of enlisted men in the four lower grades now are eligible for payments.

By requiring the Governmnt to make the entire initial payment, he explained, delay would be avoided and hardship averted.

The changes he supported would, he said, cost about 393 million dollars additional during the remaining nine months of this fiscal year.

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

Allied Block of Reich Postwar Trade Urged

Victorious Allies must prevent Germany from reestablishing economic power in South America in the postwar period, else the outlook will be grave for American business there, declared Mariano Font, Dun & Bradstreet executive, yesterday before the Washington Rotary Club.

"Germany must be restricted by treaty from engaging in South American commerce," Font said, contending "economic warfare must be continued in peace as well as in war to prevent German business genius from swamping South America with goods at prices with which American enterprise cannot profitably compete."

Coupling our postwar trade outlook with realities of contemporary South America, Font said:

"Our future business relations with South America hinge upon surpluses. It will be a couple of years after the war before America will have surpluses in any line and in appreciable amounts. Domestic markets will absorb most of what we have. But, surpluses, once acquired, will find a ready market provided American industry is guided by understanding of South American credit conceptions.

"Brazil, Argentina and Chile today are so well industrialized they alone could furnish virtually all that is required by the whole of South America," he said.

On postwar unemployment, Font was bluntly outspoken.

"There'll be unemployed millions, but not to the extent following the 1929 crash," he said. "It will take long weary months to make industrial readjustments. During that time there will be inevitable hardships, unless," and he emphasized the point, "business and Government join to cushion people from the shock of letdown from the current full economy of war."

McGranery May Get Justice Post

The appointment of Representative McGranery (Democrat) of Philadelphia as assistant to the Attorney General is expected to be sent to the Senate next week.

A Government official, who asked not to be identified, said the Philadelphia attorney is scheduled to succeed James H. Rowe, jr., who resigned to accept a Navy commission. McGranery's Justice Department appointment has been rumored ever since last spring when Pennsylvania's new reapportionment act eliminated the Philadelphia congressional district he represents.

Jones Begins Fight For Food Program

Big Job Ahead

Conference 'Sells' Idea Of Long War

Army convictions that America still faces a long hard war against the Axis, with the next year promising decisive but not necessarily final tests, were substantially "sold" to industry, labor and newspaper leaders during conferences here on Monday and Tuesday, War Department officials said last night.

They quoted members of the conference as voicing belief the job yet to be done in winning the war is tremendous. A second chief reaction was that the straight-from-the-shoulder picture of the future job would be a help in getting it finished.

Typical was the reaction of Henry Ford 2d, who said "the conference will give all of us a broader view of what we are trying to do and what we must do. The conference should have a very good effect on all concerned, pointing the way we should go. It gives a much clearer picture of the entire war situation. I wish more people could have attended for I believe much benefit will come of it."

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, said the factual reports presented at the sessions indicated "greater need of both workers and management applying themselves more diligently than ever to the task of providing our forces with all of the essential equipment necessary for winning the war."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, described the conference as "most interesting and educational."

"It is clearly evident," Mr. Green said, "that all of us will gain a better understanding of the war situation, military strategy and the need for increased producion as a result of these sessions."

John L. Collyer, president of the B. F. Goodrich Co., said the conference was "extremely enlightening, impressive and inspiring" and that it had left in the minds of all who attended a full understanding of "the tremendous job still to be done."

The hope that more such conferences would be held was expressed by several participants, including Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of the New York Times, who said:

"The more that we can be told of the difficulties of this war, the more we will all knuckle down to the tasks that lie ahead."

Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, said he had come away with two outstanding impressions.

"First," he said, "our military strategy has been planned down to the last detail by competent, seasoned military leadership that knows its business. Second, the fighting in this war has just begun and any slackening or complacency on the home front will seriously jeopardize our offensive plans, prolong the war and make more costly our ultimate victory."

Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machine Corp., characterized the conference as "the most interesting and instructive meeting I have attended since the start of the Victory program."

"Everyone who has attended is going to have a better realization of the individual responsibility of every man and woman in the production of the munitions of war," Watson declared.

Walter M. Dear, of the Jersey Journal, Jersey City, N. J., past president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said he was satisfied that "we have a long, hard row ahead of us before the war is won."

Gardner Cowles, jr., publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, Des Moines, Iowa, said he thought the War Department had "struck exactly the right note of candor" and Henry Luce, publisher of Time magazine, said he wished there was "a method of communication whereby, without revealing military secrets, more of the details we have heard could get into print."

Hopes to Obtain Congressional Backing for Plan

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones yesterday opened the Administration's drive to win congressional support for its dual-purpose food-pricing program.

Evolved from a running battle now more than a year old, and closely tied to the Nation's struggle with inflation, the new plan calls for:

1. Guaranteed support prices to farmers, placed high enough to cover their increased production costs.

2. Use of subsidies to protect consumers against corresponding increases at the grocery store.

Jones asked Congress to extend the life of the Commodity Credit Corp. for 18 months and increase its borrowing power by a half billion dollars. This sum, plus an equal amount on hand, would be used by the agency to place price "floors" under essential farm crops.

Since these floors nearly always would be placed higher than parity prices, he said, to insure production, each would become a partial subsidy—as the OPA places its ceilings at the parity level.

Avoiding the mention of "subsidy," the WFA chief said the CCC naturally would take some loss on its price supports, but that the amount would be quite small compared to sums required to insure adequate industrial production.

He asked for the additional authority to sell perishable commodities at "less than parity where necessary to prevent waste of food." Under present authorization, the CCC must sell at parity all foods except wheat being marketed as feed.

Roosevelt Message Expected

Shortly after Jones appeared before the House Banking Committee, congressional leaders returning from the White House announced President Roosevelt would send a message to Congress on the "food situation" within the next few days.

They expect him to approve the WFA price support program and serve notice the second part of the Administration's plan—to hold down prices to consumers—will not be given up, even though it requires subsidies.

Material for the President's message is now being prepared by WFA and Department of Agriculture officials. The White House has asked for information to show how subsidies have benefited both farmers and consumers.

Attending the White House conference yesterday were Vice President Wallace, Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky, House Speaker Rayburn of Texas, and House Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts.

Jones used Irish potatoes to show the House committee how support prices would be used and to prove his point that perishable commodities sometimes should be sold below parity.

"We purchased 9000 cars of potatoes and less than one-half of 1 per cent was lost from a crop 30 per cent above average in size.

"The potatoes were channeled to starch factories, to hospitals and everywhere a use could be made of them. We lost only 475 cars. The procedure cost the Government four million dollars," he said.

Chairman Steagall (Democrat) of Alabama declared he considered this loss very slight on so large an undertaking and expressed doubt it would have been any less if the CCC had been permitted to put the potatoes on the market at bargain rates.

Other members said the power to sell at less than parity might give the CCC ability to depress market prices and bring losses to regular trade groups.

The WFA chief insisted the authority might serve a useful purpose in an emergency situation, but said he was willing for the committee to "place in all the safeguards" it felt needed.

"In order to have support prices and make them work, the Government has got to be there when production is up and ready to purchase. The elements of chance govern farm production and no person is able to predict with certainty when and where we would need to sell at less than parity," he declared.

Wholesale Ceiling Placed on Carrots

Regional offices of OPA were instructed yesterday to set maximum wholesale prices for carrots, using the price of 4.87 cents a bunch at Salinas, Calif., as a base.

To this base will be added transportation costs and a fixed retail mark-up, OPA said, pending establishment of permanent dollar-and-cents ceilings throughout the country.

Carrots will be the third fresh vegetable brought under price control, ceilings having recently been placed on cabbage and lettuce.

stance of pure dictatorship."

Judge Atwell said the company was found by a hearing officer to have had, on April 8, in their possession, 1063 No. 6 Class A gasoline coupons accepted in exchange for gasoline prior to the effective date. The hearing officer ruled the violation was gross carelessness and ordered the shutdown.

Commenting on Atwell's ruling, C. B. Braun, regional deputy OPA administrator said:

"While this precise point has not been decided in any other OPA case, Federal District Courts throughout the country have heretofore upheld the administrator's suspension orders, thus by implication deciding he had authority to enter them."

Venezuela Denies U. S. Troops There

Caracus, Venezuela, Sept. 29 (AP). The National Press office said today that maps printed in foreign newspapers, on the basis of information supplied by Gen. George C. Marshall, showing United States troops in Venezuela, were in error.

Confusion probably arose from the assignment of an American military mission here to teach Venezuelan artillerymen, but it left last March, the office added in a statement.

(The arrival of American forces in Venezuela, March 12, 1942, was reported among other U. S. Army movements in a map made public by General Marshall at Washington, September 8).

Court Revives 23-Year-Old Suit

A 23-year-old suit was resumed in District Court yesterday.

The defendant, the American Telegraphone Co., now exists only on paper. The original plaintiff has been dead for years. There are more than a million pieces of documentary evidence in the case.

In 1920, one of the stockholders in the company filed suit charging the company and its officers with mismanagement, and asked an injunction to oust the officers. At that time the company had produced a few telegraphones, voice-recording devices invented by a Norwegian, and was expected to accumulate large profits.

Justice Frederick L. Siddons of the old District Supreme Court decided in 1927 that there was no evidence of fraud. It was then estimated by the plaintiffs that about 100 million dollars might have been realized had the company been properly managed.

No money was paid and the case was reopened with other stockholders entering the suit as plaintiffs. Deaths, the difficulty of gathering evidence, and other factors prolonged the case with 17,000 stockholders all over the world awaiting the verdict.

Yesterday, Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher ordered that December 6 be set as the date for final hearings. He said that it appeared to the court that the receiver holds funds of $58,426.76 and that costs and allowances claimed against the funds aggregated a larger amount.

He ordered that all interested persons come to the hearing and file their claims before November 22, or else "be forever barred from participation in the said fund." He ordered that publication be made in newspapers of this city, New York, San Francisco and Chicago.

2 U. S. Fliers Capture 150 Prisoners

A Navy flier's own story of how he and his radio man captured 150 Italian soldiers and herded them to American lines without leaving their plane during the Sicilian invasion, was released by the Navy yesterday.

The airmen were lieut. (jg.) Paul E. Coughlin, Edina, Mo., and Radioman Richard Shafer, Albany, Oreg., who directed the prisoners' march by firing at their heels.

Coughlin told the story to his commanding officer:

"I circled past some of our soldiers, a forward patrol, on the beach at the foot of a cliff.

"They waved and pointed at the hill, which they were evidently having trouble gaining. I began to strafe this position and after about four runs of fixed and free gunfire, white flags and Italians began appearing. I flew low and motioned for them to go in the general direction of our troops; their movement was hurried and guided by the very accurate fire of the radioman.

"Looking about the top of the hill for a way to direct them, where they would be in the open, I saw white flags waving over four entrenchments. As the prisoners would get close to one of these positions, I would fly over and wave for them to go in the direction of the others. They were a little slow coming out until a few shots were fired close to them. In this way we got all out into the open and headed for the beach.

"We rode herd on them. When one would start to stray or they would start spreading, shots were placed close to the stragglers. This worked very well and they gathered forces as they went forward, resulting in what appeared to be about 150 by the time they reached the (American) soldiers on the beach.

"At a critical point when they were scattering out, the free gun jammed. I told the radioman not to let them know, for they might try to escape. I circled low around them and told him to point the gun in their direction. As we got close to one who was making a run for it, I heard some shots fired. Looking back I saw the radioman aiming the machine gun and firing his .45 beside it, making the fugitive run in the other direction.

"I went back over the hill and strafed the other positions, this time corralling about 30 stragglers. As the group reached the crest of the hill, I noticed a burst of anti-aircraft fire on my starboard beam. Looking quickly around the sky, I saw two enemy fighters (German Messerschmitts 109's) closing on my tail. I put the plane into a steep dive. Five-inch shells from my cruiser began breaking between me and the enemy fighters, forcing them to turn away.

"As the planes disappeared, I went back to find my prisoners gone, but a few shots and a little strafing of the buildings and vicinity soon rounded up most of them again."

Blades Freed

Work-Fight Law Test Prevented

Assistant Attorney General Thomas Clark, in charge of the criminal division of the Department of Justice, announced last night that he will confer today with Victor Rotnem, in charge of the department's civil liberties division, following the failure to test the constitutionality of the Maryland 'work or fight" law in Baltimore City Court yesterday, although the convicted man who brought the action was freed. Clark would not amplify his statement.

Nelson Blades, the convicted man, was relieved of a six months' sentence and a $500 fine, but Judge William L. Henderson said he did "not believe it necessary to discuss the constitutionality of the law itself."

Attorney General William Walsh told the court he did not think Blades should have been convicted in Somerset County. In a similar case, that of Stanley Day in Montgomery County, State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr., said much the same thing and entered a plea of not guilty for Day, thus freeing him and preventing an appeal and a test of the law.

Under the Maryland law a test of the constitutionality of the "work or fight" act cannot be made except by a convicted man under sentence. The freeing of Day and Blades thus prevented a test of the law, according to Simpson and Joseph I. Paper, who represented Blades on behalf of the Workers' Defense League.

District Captain Gets Purple Heart

Capt. Hugh D. Leidel, USMC, 22, son of Mrs. C. W. Leidel, 1882 Columbia rd. nw., has been awarded the Purple Heart at a regimental review at a South Pacific base, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Awarded the Silver Star Medal last May for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action on Guadalcanal" when on numerous occasions he led his men over a dangerous ridge in the face of heavy machine-gun cross-fire, he was presented the Purple Heart for a wound suffered in the fighting. Captain Leidel is now at a rest camp, the Navy said.

Change of Venue Sought for Somerset Editor's Libel Trial

Two possibilities that State's Attorney Prentiss Ward Evans of Somerset County, Md., the 32-year-old former Government clerk here who sought and obtained an indictment of criminal libel against Rives Matthews, publisher of the Somerset News, would not conduct the trial prosecution loomed last night.

While employed in Washington he registered with Local Board 8 and was classified "4-B" in the draft, the classification that withholds from Army induction "State officials elected by a State-wide vote." The local board, it was announced, had gained the impression a "State's Attorney" was a State official and thereby subject to deferment under the law. When the board found this was not true, it changed the classification to "Pending One" and said this newer designation means that Evans is about to undergo a physical examination and induction.

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

It was said that Evans' papers are to be transferred to Somerset County and there is strong likelihood that he will be placed in "1-A" at the expiration of the stoppage on classifications and reclassifications on October 1, as was ordered by the National Selective Service System on September 15 pending inventory.

ANPA Handling Case

The second reason is that the American Newspaper Publishers Association has stepped actively in the case in defense of Matthews. Elisha Hanson, chief counsel for the ANPA, working with Edgar A. Jones, Somerset County attorney, announced last night they would seek a change of venue to Cambridge, Dorchester County seat, "on the ground Matthews would be unable to get a fair trial in Somerset County."

Matthews was indicted as a result of publishing articles in his paper in reference to a trip by automobile made by State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes. The indictment charged "scandalous, malicious, wicked, mischievous and defamatory libel" by Matthews.

Matthews charged, in print, that Tawes had misused gasoline rationing coupons on a trip to Georgia in a State-owned automobile. The Somerset County War Price and Ration Board found Tawes innocent of violating the pleasure driving ban. Matthews was arrested on the libel charge subsequently.

Matthews Is Undaunted

Later, the Maryland State office of OPA revoked Tawes' personal and occupational ration books, but Somerset County State's Attorney Evans said the libel charge would be pressed. Matthews was indicted Tuesday.

Matthews said last night that "no matter what the outcome of my trial, I intend to lead a crusade of outraged citizens to Annapolis in January, when the Legislature sits, and demand that Comptroller Tawes be impeached by that body for misuse of a State-owned automobile and contributing to a breakdown in public morale in its attitude toward OPA and compliance with OPA wartime regulations."

The trial, unless the change of venue is granted, will come up in Somerset County Circuit Court next week, with three judges sitting. The court is in session this week, but it is concerning itself with civil matters only.

Matthews said he would call on Governor Herbert O'Conor to testify in his behalf that Tawes did use a State car.

There is no "specific penalty for criminal libel under Maryland law," Evans said yesterday. He said that "on conviction the court could, on its own discretion, levy a fine or jail sentence or both."

The judges expected to hear the case, if held in Somerset County, are Chief Judge Levin Claude Bailey, of Salisbury; W. Laird Henry, Jr., of Cambridge, and Edmond H. Johnson, of Ocean City.

The case has already attracted Nation-wide attention. In addition to the ANPA, Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota, has informed Matthews he stands ready to form a protest group of public-spirited citizens to work in Matthews' behalf. Matthews, however, has withheld a statement on this feature of his defense on advice of counsel.

Court Practice Rules Change Plea Rejected

Four judges of the Sixth Maryland Judicial Circuit comprising Montgomery and Frederick Counties, yesterday denied a petition filed by a group of 40 Montgomery and Prince Georges County attorneys for a relaxation of the recent ruling restricting practice before the Montgomery County Circuit Court.

Under the ruling, which becomes effective Friday, no attorney may file pleadings before the court who does not maintain offices in the county or who is not directly associated with a law firm maintaining offices there.

Code Is Discussed

A number of lawyers in Prince Georges County and lawyers from Montgomery who maintain their offices in Washington complained the ruling was contrary to the Maryland legal code which permits a member of the Maryland Bar to practice anywhere in the State.

The decision yesterday, handed down by Associate Judge Charles W. Woodward, stated that the ruling did not restrict legal practice in the county, but simply prevented the filing of pleadings by out-of-county lawyers.

Sitting with Judge Woodward were Chief Judge Edward S. Delaplane and Associate Judges Stedman Prescott and Patrick M. Schnauffer. Judges Woodward and Prescott are the Montgomery County members of the circuit and Judges Delaplane and Schnauffer represent Frederick County.

May Appeal Case

Several of the out-of-county attorneys indicated after the hearing they may seek a test of the ruling before the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Under the ruling, members in good standing of the Maryland Court of Appeals, who regularly maintain bonafide offices in Montgomery County and who spend a "reasonable amount of time in such offices," shall be eligible to become members of the circuit court bar on making application in writing on forms provided by the circuit court clerk.

Any nonmember may practice before the court provided he is associated with an enrolled member in the institution.

Members of the lawyers' committee appearing before the judges were J. Harry Welch, Roger J. Whiteford, H. Winship Wheatley and Frederick Stohlman. Two other members of the group, E. Barrett Prettyman and Arthur J. Hilland, were unable to attend.

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

Fugitive Sought In Mississippi Is Captured Here

Indicted by a Federal grand jury in Biloxi, Miss., in June, 1942, for illegally wearing an Army uniform, John F. Regan, 33, of 1902 G st. nw., was arrested here yesterday by special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Regan was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and held for removal to Mississippi, where he had been sought for more than a year. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said Regan had misrepresented himself as a sergeant and had sold advertising to businessmen in Hattiesburg, Miss., for a military publication.

Officials said Regan had been living in the District for a year, working at odd jobs.

Slayer Scales Fence, Flees District Jail

Scaling an 8-foot wire fence, monkey fashion, while other prisoners and an unarmed District Jail guard watched in amazement, a 21-year-old murderer escaped from the jail's recreation yard last night.

The man, Broadus Mungo, Negro, of 2009 L st. nw., who was convicted in May, 1941, in the death of another Negro, was last seen running in the direction of Union Station. After serving two years of an 8-to-24-year sentence at Lorton Reformatory, he had been transhere three months ago on a work assignment.

Said to have been "a splendid worker and model prisoner" at all times, Mungo had never displayed any unusual behavior, according to jail officials. He was participating in games with the other prisoners at the time of his escape. A police broadcast was flashed immediately.

On February 1, 1941, Mungo shot and killed Ernest F. Bowling, 28, of 1007 20th st. nw., in front of the Blue Grass Grill, 1811 L st. nw. Mungo, in turn, was shot in the right hip by an officer who was on the premises at the time, and was taken to Emergency Hospital before being tried for second-degree murder.

The first United States warship to travel around the world was the Vincennes, which took four years for the trip—1826-1830.

charge of the committee, and quoted Connally's own statement that the Senate had unlimited debate while the House could institute gag rule as a reason why he would not have been forced to follow House moves.

As for White House pressure, Connally's friends pointed out that the White House had never before let it be known exactly how the President stood, and hinted that the same developments influencing the committee undoubtedly also influenced the President.

Two Things Certain

At any rate, whether it becomes known that the committee was forced to act, or bided the proper time according to international developments, two things are certain:

1. The committee will submit its own resolution which it is now writing, according to a brief statement issued by Connally yesterday. The Fulbright resolution, the B2H2 resolution, and several others will therefore go on the shelf, although the committee written resolution very likely will incorporate some of the points of one or both.

2. The resolution will not be long coming. Senator Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky, majority leader and a committee member, said it "would not be presented this week." Senator Gillette (Republican) of Iowa, also a committee member, said it would reach the Senate in two or three weeks.

Those who have long been urging passage of a resolution expressing Senate opinion on postwar aims were jubilant last night at the subcommittee statement issued after an executive session.

Ball declared he was "very happy" and that the submission of a resolution was what he had been working for many months.

Hill said:

"The announcement is very encouraging. I hope that what the subcommittee writes will embody the principles of our resolution."

Announcement of the subcommittee's decision to report a resolution was made after the return of four leaders from the White House—Vice President Wallace, Barkley, Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas and House Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat) of Massachusetts.

Court Sets Trial In Bad-Check Case

Donald J. Herzog, 28, of Baltimore, pleaded not guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to six charges of false pretenses in passing of bad checks. Trial was set for October 8.

Herzog was recently released from the Maryland House of Correction when the Maryland Circuit Court ruled a State statute giving the Governor power to revoke a conditional pardon without a hearing was unconstitutional. The case is to be taken to the Maryland Court of Appeals on October 12, according to Attorney James J. Laughlin.

Herzog has three charges of passing bad checks pending against him in Baltimore.

day down the east end of the Wewak Peninsula.

The Australians, in their slow drive against Finschhafen from the north, captured additional Japanese positions south of the Bumi River. This drive, closest of three main drives against the base, pushed into Salankaua plantation. Still another force coming up from behind made progress while the third force driving east from Lae advanced to Mango Point.

American Air Support

The hard-fighting ground troops had the support of American attack and dive bombers that strafed coastal trails on which Japanese still contested the advance.

Farther to the northwest where Allied forces were pointed toward Madang, heavy bombers dropped 24 tons of 1000-pound bombs and caused extensive landslide obstructions along the narrow trails.

Bomber planes from the South Pacific command turned their attention to Bougainville Island in the Solomons and scored damaging hits on supply and bivouac areas and gun positions at Jakohina and Kangu Hill.

There, too, the Japanese offered aerial resistance, sending up 30 fighters to intercept. American fighters shot down two Japanese Zeros and we lost one fighter.

At the time of Pearl Harbor, about 430 oil tankers were under the American flag.

dropped its tin fish. Men aboard ships in the harbor reported seeing a plane go down in flames near Savo. However, observers were unable to determine whether this was the plane which attacked the transport.

One of the high altitude bombers which served as decoys was shot down by a night fighter.

During the height of the antiaircraft fire from the beach and anchored ships, the first plane of a flight of Liberator bombers returning from a dusk raid on Kahili flew in and drew a heavy barrage from our own guns before it was recognized as an American bomber.

The returning ship was hit and damaged, but made a safe landing. Other planes in the bomber flight had to circle about for some time while the bomber field runway, slightly damaged by bombs dropped from the high level enemy bombers, was repaired.

No Delay Due Before Father Draft Begins

there are 27,000 women. Only 364 of the men have received occupational deferments, and 202 of these are engineers."

Barkley indicated he might support the mild Bailey-Clark substitute, requiring that indispensability of Government workers be certified by department heads before they are deferred, but opposed the so-called Taft substitute, calling fathers under 30 before older family heads.

Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican) of Ohio, meanwhile, led the move for a more sweeping substitute, combining portions of his own and the Bailey-Clark amendments with other provisions to ease the draft impact on fathers.

While Senator Sheridan Downey (Democrat) of California held the floor all day in an attack on high command plans to build a large land army, Taft conferred with a group of Senators from both sides of the aisle on the substitute bill. Another conference will be held this morning before introduction of the measure.

The substitute is expected to include these points:

1—An absolute ban on occupational deferment of men under 30 in Federal, State or municipal government service. Essential men, the group argues, should first be inducted and then assigned to any indispensable Government position.

2—A similar prohibition on deferment of men under 30 holding jobs in private industry, unless employed in agriculture or in plants producing airplanes, ordnance, munitions, ships or mines producing strategic metals.

3—Hard and fast specification of all draft categories, as under Kilday bill, with provision that each category be exhausted nationally instead of on a State or county basis, before the next category is called. Fathers over 30 would be placed in the last class, and would not be reachted until next year.

Downey hit repeatedly at high command strategy in his day-long appeal for the Wheeler bill, charging Germany could be defeated in a matter of months by concentrating all available bomber strength in an air assault on the Reich. He said air generals in the field should be called home for consultation: "We should listen to the men who fly."

The California Democrat was rebuked by Senate Majority Whip Lister Hill, who said he was surprised at Downey's charges when Gen. George C. Marshall, Admiral Ernest J. King "and others of our high command aren't here to defend themselves."

Hill asked Downey why he failed to question Marshall and King on these lines when they appeared before the Military Committee. Downey said he started to but was aware of the "contemptuous smiles" of other committeemen. Hill retorted that if Downey thought the matter so important he should not let "smiles of others drive him off." Downey said he regarded the committee as "nothing more than a rubber stamp for what the Army, the Navy and the White House asks."

The Californian, who with Wheeler will again claim the floor today, charged that 95 per cent of the damage already done to the enemy has been done by the Army and Navy Air Forces with proportionately small losses.

"If we should concentrate upon Germany all of available bombers, within 60 days we could ruin at least 25 per cent of her cities and her production," Downey said, "within four months at least 50 per cent, and if that were not sufficient to force surrender, in a comparatively short time longer, we could pound to rubble and dust almost every city, factory and building that Germany possesses."

Downey argued that after that it would be necessary only to march "to the ruins of Berlin" only a few hundred thousand of the Allied soldiers now stationed in England and Africa, and "if it made our leaders any happier," we could transport a few "token thousands" from troops now in the United States.

"I think our high command is making a terrible blunder," Downey said.

Downey suggested that not only our flying generals be called back for consultation on strategy, but perhaps Generals MacArthur and Eisenhower as well.

"I wonder what Hitler would be doing while those fellows were over here," Barkley remarked to newsmen.

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

Woman Preacher Says She Had Right To Tell Fortunes

The Corporation Counsel's office at Municipal Court was looking into legal tomes yesterday to solve its newest problem—is an ordained minister entitled to tell fortunes without a license?

The question came up in the case of Mrs. Zoe Lydia Eggers, 2210 Pennsylvaia ave. nw., who was charged with being an unlicensed fortune teller. Arrangned before Judge Thomas D. Quinn, she pleaded not guilty.

Her attorney, James J. Laughlin, contended District regulations state ordained ministers may tell fortunes without having a license providing proceeds are turned over to the church. Mrs. Eggers, a minister of the Spiritualists' Church, complied with the regulation, he said.

Judge Quinn cotinued the case until October 13.

Henry C. Heinz Slain in Battle With Prowler

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Sept. 29.—Henry C. Heinz, 63, Atlanta banker and past president of Kiwanis International, was shot to death by a masked prowler at his home last night.

His son-in-law, Dr. Bryant K. Vann, 40, rushing to the Heinz home in answer to a call for help, was wounded seriously in a gun battle with police when each apparently mistook the other for the slayer.

Police Capt. L. J. Carroll said Radio Patrolmen W. M. Miller and M. W. Blackwell reported they answered the alarm shortly after Heinz, vice president of the Citizens & Southern National Bank, was slain.

Blackwell went to the rear of the house and Miller entered the front. The former said a man began firing at him from a woods back of the house and he returned the fire. Miller, hearing the shots, raced outside and joined his partner. In the exchange of shots, Dr. Vann, a dentist, was wounded, the officers said.

Mrs. Heinz, daughter of the late Asa Candler, sr., Atlanta capitalist, told police, they said, that she was preparing to retire when she heard scuffling in the sun parlor of her home. She said she found her husband grappling with a masked man, and ran to get a pistol. While she was gone, she related, she heard two shots. Returning, she said she found Heinz on the floor, a bullet through his heart. The intruder had disappeared.

New X-Rays Show High Altitude Effect

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 29.—For the first time in aviation history, X-ray pictures have been taken of men in a decompression chamber in an effore to learn more about the painful changes which take place in the body at high altitudes, General Electric X-Ray Corp. announced today.

With the volunteer "pilots" theoretically flying at 38,000 feet, scientists obtained X-ray pictures of even the "air pockets" or gas formations which occur in the body in the stratosphere.

They said the films also showed marked and significant changes in the heart, lungs, joint and muscles of the subjects. More experiments are planned to learn exactly how these changes take place and how to overcome them.

The films were taken in the high altitude test chamber at Northwestern University's Medical School by Dr. A. C. Ivy, professor of physiology, and Drs. H. F. Adler, William Burkhart and A. J. Atkinson.

Dr. Ivy said findings so far had given his staff some "very valuable information" regarding the difficulties. He expressed amazement at the size of some of the bubbles and air pockets which showed up on the X-ray films.

One film disclosed a large air pocket near a knee joint of one of the "pilots." It was not there before or after his "flight."

Scientists have known for some time, Dr. Ivy said, that at 38,000 feet many pilots experience pain caused by the expansion of gases within the body. The gas in a flier's stomach, for instance, will sometimes expand about six times.

Particles of dissolved gases that lodge in the fat tissue and the joints expand as the outside pressure decreases, resulting in pain which some describe as more severe than rheumatism.

Guggenheim Heiress, 40, to Wed D. C. Soldier, 28, Tomorrow

By International News Service

Denver, Sept. 29.—Romance has blossomed anew for Mrs. Hazel Guggenheim King-Farlow McKinley, the tall, attractive 20 million dollar heiress of the Guggenheim fortune, International News Service learned exclusively tonight.

The 40-year-old heiress will take as her third husband, a 28-year-old soldier, Corpl. Larry Leonard, formerly of Washington, D. C., and New Orleans. The groom-to-be is now attending gunnery school at Lowry Field, Denver.

[In Washington, the Army last night stated Corpl. Larry Leonard, now stationed at Lowry Field in Denver, was listed as residing at 1529 18th st. nw. At that address, Mrs. Betty Rush, said she was the mother of a soldier by that name. She declared rumors her son might marry the Guggenheim heiress were "just a joke." Insisting there was no truth in the story, she commented, "he is just teasing."—Editor's note.]

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Benjamin Guggenheim, who lost his life in the sinking of the Titanic, and is the niece of the late United States Senator Simon Guggenheim of Colorado. Her father was a founder of the multimillion dollar American Smelting & Refining Corp. and the Worthington Pump Co.

Mother of Two Children

The heiress and her corporal sweetheart will be married Friday night in Denver by District Judge Charles Sackman at the home of Charles Ginsburg, Denver attorney for Mrs. McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley is the mother of two children by her first husband, Maj. Dennys King-Farlow, British officer, socialite and son of the Chief Justice of Nassau, Bahama Islands.

Her second husband was Lieut. Charles McKinley, a noted artist, who recently was killed in action in Africa. Lieutenant McKinley was a relative of President McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley, who had lived in England for 20 years, said this was her first trip to Colorado—the State in which the fabulous Guggenheim fortune was founded during the early days of the gold and silver mining boom in the Rockies.

Speaks of Romance

Of her romance with the young corporal, Mrs. McKinley said:

"I am very much in love with Larry, who is an athlete and an amateur actor, in addition to being a soldier.

"Larry is an orphan. He doesn't have anything in the way of an educational, financial or social background, but he is a wonderful gentleman. Since he's an athlete and an actor, I know he'll keep me amused."

Mrs. McKinley met her husband-to-be about four months ago. She insisted that her two children proposed for her. She said:

"My babies like Larry very much. They wrote him a letter and asked him to marry me."

The children are John, 11, and Barbara, 9, now both in school in California.

How 18 Yanks Tackled an Entire Battalion

By Richard Tregaskis
International News Service Staff Writer

With the United States Fifth Army in Italy (delayed)—The story of a daring engagement in which 18 Americans armed with "bazookas," tommy guns and rifles tackled a battalion of Germans armed with two 88-mm guns, anti-tank guns and machine guns was told today by two of the participants.

In the engagement—typical of the guerilla fighting in some parts of the Fifth Army's front—the Americans crept to within 100 yards of the enemy positions before opening fire.

They estimated that 20 Germans met death and that two German machine guns were knocked out of action in the fight.

In heavily wooded hilly terrain—according to Sergt. Howard W. Andre of Philadelphia, who led the "bazooka" crews—the American patrol approached so close to the Germans that they could see the facial features of the enemy and could hear not only talking but the click of boots on a nearby road.

Foe All Set Up

"We found the Germans in a U-shaped bend along a mountain-side road near Ragnano," said Andre. "We were able to get up on the high ground, higher than they were and a couple of hundred yards away without being spotted.

"They were all set up along the road with 88's, antitank guns and machine guns.

"We decided to attack. We knew if we could get the bazookas close enough to hit the 88's with the first shots we might knock them out.

"We had to cross a flat spot where the vegetation wasn't very thick to get into position, but the Germans were looking right at the hill we were on with field glasses.

"We wanted to wait until they took their glasses off us, but they didn't.

"Finally we decided to attack anyhow, because it was getting toward night and getting dark.

"Well, the Germans saw us while we were setting up our 'zoot' guns—(bazookas)—and turned their 88's around.

Yelled "Bazooka"

"We were able to fire one bazooka. We saw the shell hit with a big sheet of flame in the middle of one of the 88's crews and get some of the Germans.

"They yelled 'Bazooka!'—they know the word by this time—and ran away from their gun.

"Everything would have been all right if we could have kept firing, but we couldn't—the zoot guns were out of action—and the Germans came back to their guns and opened up on us.

"They were so close we could hear them loading the breech and giving the order to fire.

"An antitank gun opened up on the right and machine guns on the left, and all we had to fight them with was our tommy guns and rifles.

"The .88's were right on us. They put five shells right in a 10-yard area around me. Everything was flashes, dust and smoke. They hit one of the Bakookas and some pieces of it hit my helmet.

"One of the bazooka men was wounded."

Other Group Opens Up

Meanwhile, however, Sergeant Andre said the rest of the little American group on a hill higher and above the bazookas were giving the Germans a lacing with accurate rifle and tommy gunfire. That section of men was led by Sergt. John B. Woodhall of Jamesville, Minn., and Corpl. Albert H. Henson of Collinsville, Ill.

Henson told the story:

"We located two machine-gun nests pretty close together and opened up on them with tommy guns and rifles.

"We could hear the sound of their boots as they ran down the road—and we picked them off as they ran. We killed about eight of them.

"Well, we had done enough damage and they were getting pretty rough so we withdrew to a road block.

3 DAYS TO GO!

A Personal Message for YOU!

Thousands of patriotic citizens responded to the "zero hour" appeal to put our Third War Loan Drive over the top with down-the-stretch rush! Issuing agents—postoffices, banks, building and loan associations, theaters, stores—were kept busy writing those popular "E" bonds. BUT we still must buy thousands more to put our city over the "individual sales" quota!

"Nobody has asked me to buy a bond," said a phone call to War Finance Headquarters.

Brother you're being asked now—this is YOUR invitation (if you need an invitation) to buy that EXTRA $100 bond!

That bond is needed—and badly—to put our city into the proud, patriotic "Quota Met" column! Don't let the talk about billions and millions mislead you—YOUR bond is important just as every single soldier in our army is important! That's democracy in action! It's your move!

Milk Subsidy Plan Protested By Producers

In many instances, it was asserted, persons are today being required to obey Government regulations through "pressure tactics" and are made "fearful of entering the courts to protect their constitutional rights."

"If Congress intends to subsidize living costs for those who can afford to pay, let it make cash payments to those consumers who are to benefit; and let those beneficiaries shoulder the responsibility of this stigma," it was urged.

John Brandt of Minneapolis, the federation's president, declared he doubted the American public buying war bonds realized that some of the money would go into subsidy payments.

Three Billions for Grocery Bills

"Money alone will not win the war, but I wonder whether you have thought that of the 15 billion dollars being raised now in bond sales, possibly three billions are intended to pay grocery bills?" he asked the Congressmen.

"I think it might be better, if you don't want the consumers to pay their own bills, to just let the amount of the subsidy go on their pay checks in the form of a bonus. That would be clear cut," he said, "and also it would reveal what a small amount the consumer is going to get out of all this.

"If you voted a subsidy big enough to purchase the entire food production of the country and then gave it all away, you could not decrease the cost of living by 20 per cent."

"All Sorts of Predicaments"

Brandt declared "government by regulation" has driven farmers into "all sorts of predicaments." The Twin City Milk Producers Association, he said, has been ordered by the War Labor Board to sign a contract with "John L. Lewis"—"something you Congressmen did not intend when you passed fair labor practice laws."

Also, he declared, dairymen selling dry milk powder to the Government have to sign an "offer to sell" that contains a clause saying they must have lived up to Government provisions covering overtime—although specific exemptions from the provision were made by Congress for "first processors of farm products."

"It's getting so we are ashamed of the cow who dares give milk on Sunday at less than time and a half pay," he said.

Four Objections Offered

A distinction should be drawn between groups unable to pay increased prices and those perfectly able to shoulder their own grocery bills, the federation statement said.

Among groups whose earnings should be supplemented by the Government, were listed: Ministers, educators, and "others engaged in public service of this character," and those who for various reasons —such as old age, dependency, disability and lack of sufficient skill—"are not able to earn a sufficient amount of money to provide a decent standard of living."

Four specific objections to food subsidies were offered:

1. They "represent a constantly increasing public debt which will be transferred, when they return from the war, in large part, to the men in our fighting forces, the majority of whom are now serving for $50 per month."

2. They are inflationary. "The printing of bonds to pay for food is not unlike the printing of currency to pay for governmental expenditures when the governmental credit has run out."

3. "Food subsidies imply that the Government intends to share more or less permanently the payment of the grocery bills of its citizens without regard to their capacity to pay their way through life.'

4. "The new milk subsidy, which we are informed is being worked out on the basis of individual subsidy payments to some three million producers of milk, will strengthen bureaucratic control over the lives of farm people."

The milk subsidy plan, to go into effect October 1 for a three-months "emergency" try, will grant payments from 25 to 50 cents per hundredweight to dairy farmers on their output of fluid milk and butter fat.

The federation leaders will go before the Senate subcommittee on food supply this morning in behalf of legislation "which will direct the responsible agencies of the Government to provide reasonable price ceilings which will at least compensate milk producers for their increasing costs of production and enable them to meet the competition of alternative opportunities in farming," Brandt declared.

Separate Rationing Of Butter Held Necessary

Although 16 points per pound for butter "are flattering to the dairy industry," they will not insure consumers an equitable distribution of "this favorite food," John Brandt, president of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, declared last night.

Butter must be rationed separately, rather than as part of the regular fats and oil rationing program, if everyone is to get his share, Brandt declared.

been overly occupied with diplomacy and politics.

As to immediate tasks, Crowley disclosed that he would retain the Lend-Lease Administration, the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, and the Office of Economic Warfare as "divisions" within OFEA until further study to determine what organizational changes would be desirable.

He said he did not intend either to "hire or fire," also making a particular point of his intention not to bring in "big names," to which he has a personal aversion, since he himself works closely and fully with his work-a-day employes.

Heading the divisions will be Lauchlin Currie, "on loan" as administrative assistant to the President, who will serve as executive officer of OEW, Crowley's former agency; Murray Latimer, chief executive officer of OFFR, who will serve as acting chief of that division; and Bernard Knollenberg, senior Lend-Lease deputy administrator, who will be acting administrator.

Crowley said the consolidation obviously would eliminate "a lot of overlapping" which was admittedly prevalent when the agencies were independent.

Also under consideration by Crowley is the consolidation of field activities of the former separate agencies. Field operations have been subjected to strong criticism by the military, who declared that there were so many representatives around in military zones that it was almost impossible to know who represented what and why.

Latest available figures show that the personnel now under Crowley is roughly: OEW, 3100 in the United States, 400 abroad; Lend-Lease, 600 in the United States, 100 abroad; OFRR, 258 in the United States, 31 abroad.

Still under survey by the Bureau of the Budget is the State Department's Office of Foreign Economic Coordination, a division under Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson. This unit has about 150 employes.

State Department officials, however, feel that OFEC will not be dissolved as a Seate Department unit since its functions are "at least 95 per cent" policy-making, rather than operational. OFEC functions as a "diplomatic objective" in economics to determine whether it would be expedient for this country to pursue certain ventures in certain countries.

Fauquier Farmers Warn of Crisis

considered by some farmers to force the realization of the seriousness of the situation upon the people in the city.

Yesterday this reporter visited more than a dozen dairy farms in the Catlett-Calverton sector and interviewed both farmers and their help.

Don't Want Regimentation

Strongly protesting against any Government subsidy on the ground that "farmers do not want to be regimented," the dairymen said that they "do not want any help but only a fair price for their products."

As an example of the situation in the entire area, consider Charles Gray, who said that he had been "a dairyman for 51 out of my 57 years" but was considering selling his cows one by one.

"I figured out the other day," he said, "that I would have made $300 more by simply selling my hay and feed last year than I got from my milk checks."

W. R. Burton and L. R. Cowne, two other dairymen from the same town, agred with this opinion and pointed out that it proved that "the dairy farmers' problems started before the drought."

Burdens Added by Drought

What added burdens the drought has brought to the dairymen, according to their testimony, can be summed up in these points:

1. Feed has deteriorated in quality and, at the same time, jumped in price by some 30 per cent since last year. Hay prices have doubled and better. This situation is all the more serious since the drought-stricken area now has to import nearly all of its needs, while in past years it usually raised most of its feed, and even exported some.

2. Silos, usually packed at this time of the year, are half empty. Present milk prices do not allow the farmers to go out into the open market and buy feed. This situation presages a dangerous decline in the cows' productivity by winter and next spring, it was pointed out.

3. Straw for the cows' winter bedding, bought at from $5 to $11 a ton last year, costs $20 now. What this single price increase means can best be gauged by considering that about 50 cows require from 50 to 80 tons of straw. Thousands of cows are kept in Fauquier County alone.

4. The labor situation is bad, not only because wages have more than doubled since the war started, but also because the quality of labor has "tremendously deteriorated." While 20 cents per hour were paid to helpers to fill the silos two years ago, 45 cents has to be paid now.

Agrees With Dairymen

Roy L. Wilson, president of the Catlett-Calvertson Ruritan Club, agreed with the dairymen in their dark outlook and said that only "immediate action" promises to bring any relief.

All farmers interviewed stressed their willingness to produce for the war effort to their best ability, denied any intention to profit from the war and said that it was their conviction that city consumers could afford to pay them a "just price" for their product.

The warning was sounded that "the dairymen cannot borrow any longer to keep the city supplied with milk," and that milk supplies can only be kept up by a drastic adjustment of the price to "give the farmers a living."

Developments here disclosed that employes of the White House lead all other Government employe groups in support of the bond drive, according to E. F. Bartelt, chairman of the Interdepartmental War Savings Bond Committee.

The staff of the Executive Mansion bought a total of $27,518.75 worth of bonds, 446.8 per cent of its objective.

Fritzi Brunette Dies

Hollywood, Sept. 29 (AP).—Fritzi Brunette, 53, blue-eyed star of silent films, died yesterday after a long illness. She was best known for her roles with Jack Holt, Mitchell Lewis and other leading men of the 1918-28 era.

furnishing 60 to 65 per cent of the petroleum products being used on the war fronts. He suggested that now that the Mediterranean is in the hands of the United Nations, both Great Britain and Russia should contribute a larger share of petroleum products. The largest refinery in the world is the British refinery at Abalon, Iran, Brewster said, and added that it could increase its output by 40 per cent.

3. The three were agreed that Congress and the executive branch should immediately develop a policy looking toward the acquisition of bases in other countries and the development of a strong postwar aviation industry. They suggested that the present enormously favorably lend-lease balance in our favor, and the prospect of that balance growing even heavier should carry weight in the acquisition of rights in air bases. The Senators were concerned because the United States has "spent hundreds of millions of dollars" in air bases but will have no rights in any of them six months after the war.

4. Obviously delighted with the military leadership of the United Nations and with that of the American Army and Navy, the Senators expressed strong feeling that the diplomatic force of the United States should be greatly strengthened. They pointed out that Great Britain was sending men of cabinet rank to many posts, and said confusion had been caused because of the total absence of United States diplomats in some places.

5. Because of the control of news in many parts of the globe by Reuters (British) news agency and the British Broadcasting Co., America's contribution to the war effort is not receiving sufficient recognition. In many parts of the globe the travelers found whole peoples nearly ignorant of American achievements in arms and production.

There were other points the Senators wanted to tell to the American people through one of the largest assemblages of correspondents the Capitol has seen at any one conference.

Officially and unofficially, Americans are underestimating the Japanese. Chinese sources told the Senators the Japanese are building twice as many planes as the United States believes, and have doubled their shipbuilding capacity since the beginning of the war.

War news in general has been too heavily flavored with optimism.

Men in the field are well fed, but complain about rations. Soldiers are interested in the soldier vote, but can't understand opposition to the father draft. They complain because it is easier to get officer candidate training on this side than after they are shipped overseas.

The Red Cross and the Army nurses were lauded for their infinitely valuable contribution to health and morale of the armed forces.

The present air forces of the Army and Navy seem to be very well unified and coordinated with their respective branches and with each other.

Mead revealed that a member of the French committee in Africa had warned that the collapse of Germany was imminent, and called for greater planning to prevent chaos.

Allies Fighting In Suburbs Of Naples

north and northwest of Salerno.

The bitterest fighting was at Sala, which already had changed hands many times in the last week of furious battle. This time, the British and American troops of Clark's command seized it firmly and swept triumphantly on toward Naples—a city of horror.

The acrid smoke of wanton destruction filled the noses of the advancing Fifth Army troops.

The Germans appeared to realize well in advance that they must yield ultimately, and accordingly Marshal Albert Kesselring had his plans for retreat.

The only effective defense positions which the Germans could possibly employ between the charging Allies and Naples appeared to be the slopes of Vesuvius. Even these positions appeared untenable because the Allies were in position to drive onward on both sides of the mountain, the world's most famous active volcano.

There was nothing to indicate that the enemy intended to risk a major stand anywhere near Vesuvius. Instead there was every sign that German Marshal Albert Kesselring had completed all preparations to abandon the wrecked city.

U. S. troops on the Fifth Army right flank advanced 6 miles north against the crumbling German lines and last were reported within 7 miles of Avellino, the road junction 25 miles east of Naples and back door to the port city.

Both south and east of Naples, the Germans fought back vigorously until the last minute before retreating.

"Every bride, every culvert and every road junction was blown up to slow down our advance," the spokesman said.

For the third successive day, air activity was at a low level as bad weather grounded the predominant Allied aerial armada. Only fighters and fighter-bombers got off the ground and they attacked a train and a small motor convoy. A few Nazi planes were sighted and one was destroyed. Middle East bombers attacked Greek airdromes, the port of Syros and landing strips in the Aegean. The Germans raided Coo in the Dodecanese.

On the Eighth Army front in central and Adriatic Italy, the spokesman said German parachute troops were captured who "complained bitterly that their only job was to fight rear guard actions. One said there were only 17 men left in his company as the result of recent fighting."

Although the enemy appeared to be beating toward the Volturno River, the Fifth Army may not be in a position to continue its heavy pressure far north of Naples until supplies and reinforcements can be brought up.

Culminates 20 Days' Battle

Since the first landings, Clark has depended upon reinforcements, tanks, guns, ammunition, food and other paraphernalia of modern warfare landed by shallow-draft craft on the beaches. These were loaded on trucks and transported to the front over roads which in many places had been rendered almost impassable by demolitions.

The breach in the Naples defenses culminated 20 days of savage battle started when Clark's army first landed in the Salerno area.

On the basis of the latest announced places seized by the two Allied armies, the battle line extended from Castellammare on the south shore of the Bay of Naples northeast through Nocera and Montemarano to Tarella. From there, the front dips slightly to the southeast to San Angelo, thence east to Melfi. From Melfi the line runs north of Foggia and then due east to Zapponeto.

Official reports from Clark's headquarters paid high tribute to the determination and courage of Army drivers, who made the campaign through the mountains north of Salerno possible by bringing up arms, ammunition, food and other supplies to combat troops. They drove over roads under constant fire of enemy artillery and mortars and sometimes even through machine-gun fire.

Cox Will Defend FCC ProbeMonday

Represenetative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, whose removal as chairman of the House Committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission has been asked by FCC Commissioner Clifford J. Durr, said last night that he expected to address the House, probably Monday, on the investigation.

It was understood the chairman would defend his manner of conducting the investigation and reply to charges of "bias" and "star chamber" proceedings.

NAZI LINE CRACKED—Black arrows indicate American Fifth Army drives that cracked German mountain defenses before Naples, in the area northwest of Salerno. Capture of Castellammare, Sala and Nocera was announced yesterday and Allied forces moved into coastal plains after the breakthrough at these points. more than 6000 Germans.

"Remnants of routed German troops were hurled onto the right (west) bank of the river," it said. "Our troops, capturing the enemy bridgehead fortifications in this district came out directly onto the Dnieper River in front of the town of Kiev."

The third major gain of the day was the capture of Kremenchug, on the east bank of the Dnieper River between Kiev and Dnepropetrovsk, an advance that placed the Soviets 210 miles from the Rumanian frontier.

After a great three-day battle by eight Soviet divisions and swarms of Soviet fighter planes, the Russians captured the town, Stalin said in one of his orders of the day broadcast by Moscow radio and recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

The capture of Kremenchug wiped out one of the last German bridgeheads on the east bank of the mighty river and cut off a large number of Germans pocketed between the river and Poltava.

In two other Soviet advances on White Russia between Smolensk and Kiev, the Red army drove to within 12 miles northeast of Gomel and marched on Mogilev and Orsha with the capture of more than 370 towns and villages, it was related. In one sector the Red army was said to have reached the Sozh River, but the communique gave no further explanation. The Sozh runs from Smolensk south past Gomel to the Dnieper.

"In these engagements toward Mogilev our troops killed about 2000 Germans," the communique said.

The capture of Kremenchug was hailed by a Moscow victory salute of 12 salvoes from 124 guns.

Kremenchug is a rail junction 160 miles east of Kiev, 83 miles northwest of Dnepropetrovsk. It is at the east end of the only Dnieper bridge in the area. Its capture opened vistas of outflanking the whole lower Dnieper line, if the Soviets can cross the river in force.

There were indications that the Soviets had made crossings at least with advanced units, for the German high command communique said "new attempts on the enemy's part to gain ground in some places on the middle Dnieper on the western bank failed."

Capt. Ludwig Sertorious, Berlin radio commentator, said "a few enemy nests" remained on the west bank of the Dnieper north of Kiev and that other attempts in the Kiev sector to move major forces across the Dnieper via islands in midriver were unsuccessful.

The Russian advances did not come without cost, however, as Moscow dispatches clearly indicated the Germans were by no means routed and were fighting for the river with all their strength.

The Moscow newspaper Pravda said a large number of enemy troops, tanks and guns were dug in amid many small streams and lakes with orders to hold the bridgeheads or die.

Furious battles were reported, and typical was one sector where as many as 10 German tanks, several self-propelled guns and a full regiment of infantry, supported by 20 to 30 planes, counterattacked individual Red army units. German batteries, firing from the high west bank of the river, backed up the bridgeheads on the east bank.

The Germans were sending out 10 to 12 counterattacks daily with powerful air support, Pravda said. At one point, the Red army was put in a "critical situation" but Soviet artillery pounded back the attackers.

A German broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, contended that the Dnieper fighting had become more stable. "Movements on both sides slowed down to such a degree that it seems justifiable to assume that the Dnieper placed certain natural limitations on the movements on both sides."

Halsey, Lodge Watch Flier Bag Two Japs

By Pat Robinson
International News Service Staff Writer

Guadalcanal, Sept. 21 (delayed). It isn't often that a 22-year-old youngster has the chance to prove himself a hero before an admiral and a member of the United States Senate, as Lieut. Henry Meigs of New York did at 4 o'clock this morning.

While thousands of cheering men, including Admiral William H. Halsey and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, crawled from their fox-holes and tents to cheer his exploits, young Meigs shot down in flames two Jap bombers attempting to bomb us and drove off half a dozen others.

But let young Meigs, who already had one Jap plane to his credit, tell you all about it as he did to me a few hours after the battle:

"The Jap was just about to make his bombing run when I showed up. His tail gunner fired first and, as I learned when I landed later, he put a 20 mm. cannon through the tail of my Lightning. I started firing back when I was about 400 yards from him. I missed but kept closing in on him. He dropped his bombs and as he did so I put a burst into the belly of his plane at 200 yards and his plane caught fire. He started down in a dive with his right wing burning. I dove right after him and when I was only 200 feet from him I gave him another burst. By this time we were at 18,000 feet and he was burning nicely."

Meigs continued: "I made a 90-degree turn and saw that our searchlights had caught another Jap bomber in their lights, about five miles away. I caught up with him in a hurry. I let fly and caught him in the right wing, which immediately caught fire.

"I put another burst into his plane, which already was burning fiercely. And down he went. And that's all there was to that."

Several other Jap planes, seeing what had happened to the first two, made off for home with young Meigs in hot pursuit.

Secret Weapons

The touting of secret weapons is a propaganda device resorted to, as a rule, only when known and established weapons are faring badly. A rash of rumors has been emanating from Hitler's Reich of late about terrifying new instruments of destruction. Perhaps the situation on the Eastern Front and in Italy has something to do with this output. News of the present being so unpalatable, Dr. Goebbels may prefer to dwell upon the future.

But we remain doubtful that the future will be brightened for the Nazis by the introduction of any "secret weapon" which can be considered a radical departure from the standard arms with which the war is being waged. Invention is, of course, accelerated in warfare. The Germans have already shown great ingenuity in devising improvements in existing instruments of warfare and in the tactical application of them. Their current employment of rockets to combat our Flying Fortresses is a formidable case in point. But it is a truism that such developments are swiftly met by counterbalancing measures on the opposing side. The rocket itself, obviously, is but a response to the heavily armored bomber and will in turn be neutralized by some other means.

The methods of warfare seldom change suddenly or dramatically; they develop through an evolutionary process. And whatever the enemy has brought to experimental form is not likely to be wholly unknown to, or unconsidered by, our own general staff. We doubt that the "secret weapons" now touted by the Germans will be effective even in the psychological sphere. We have learned that this sort of talk is much more likely to spring from desperation than from confidence.

The Impending Conflict

Well, we have been so preoccupied with all these wars and with one thing and another that we have just now realized that here at home we are at the threshold of another World Series. We ask you to forgive this oversight. It is our job to illumine the news as best we can, and wars or no wars, a World Series is news. It may, of course, be a little harder than usual to persuade ourselves that the whole future of civilization is at stake in the impending conflict between the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals; it may even be difficult to persuade ourselves that the baseball championship of the world is really and truly to be decided. If we can trust what we hear, neither of the championship teams is quite up to its quality of last year, though of the two, the Yanks, minus the great DiMagg and others, have suffered the more serious depreciation. With most of the younger and more than a few of the older baseball virtuosi now in the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard, it would be easy to choose from among the combined services a team at least theoretically capable of overwhelming either the Yankees or Cardinals.

However, as we seem to have heard somewhere, illusion is the essence of drama and the World Series is above everything else a great folk drama. It is more necessary than ever this year to preserve the illusion of clash of cosmic powers, since this is the first World Series that will have anything like a truly world-wide interest. Play-by-play commentaries and transcriptions will be sent by powerful short-wave transmitters to all parts of the earth for the benefit of American soldiers and sailors.

And surely there is something historic in the announcement that the British Broadcasting Company will relay the World Series programs throughout all parts of Britain. A New England newspaper suggests that it would be more fun to have a British commentator report the proceedings, but this suggestion strikes us as being almost sacrilege; it is nothing short of a proposal to reduce what we have agreed to call an "epic" to the plane of farce comedy. The Englishman at the ball game, like the unexpected visit from the mother-in-law and the effort of the delinquent lodger to evade the vigilant landlady, has been one of the staples of American comedy for at least 50 years, but it is much less amusing than it used to be. After all, baseball, with its special language, its complicated rituals and its abstruse stratagems, is a mystery which requires a rather protracted period of initiation. Moreover, there are still some native Americans who would be hard put to explain the difference between the hit-and-run and the run-and-hit or between a blooper and a can of corn. There are enough of them, at any rate, for us to be indulgent of the Englishman, who becomes indignant when he is told that a batter is deliberately perpetrating a series of fouls and who is profoundly edified by the loyal and unselfish player who sacrifices himself in order to advance one of his colleagues.

Leaks, Rumors And News

President Roosevelt has good reason to be exasperated over the furor that has been raised about the dignified and soldierly person of General Marshall. Politically minded individuals have seized upon rumors in an effort to drive a wedge between the President and Chief of Staff. The result has been neither creditable to the dispensers of rumors nor to the politicians who have used this speculation to serve their own purposes. Unfortunately, however, the roots of the difficulty do not end with officials who let confidential information "leak" out to the press or with newspapermen who print what they hear. The Government's own news policy is also seriously at fault.

In this instance the President may have a thoroughly sound reason for withholding the announcement about General Marshall which he intimates will be forthcoming in the near future. If a decision was reached at Quebec to make General Marshall commander of all the forces fighting Hitler (except the Russian armies), it may be that the announcement had to be delayed until Prime Minister Churchill confirmed the appointment with his cabinet. Possibly other considerations would make the announcement at this moment unwise. Yet we cannot see that announcement of the decision, if a decision has been made, could possibly give aid or comfort to the enemy. Prime Minister Churchill has already disclosed that a second front is to be opened in western Europe when the time is ripe. We can think of no announcement more encouraging to the American forces and demoralizing to the enemy than the appointment of this great American soldier to direct that final offensive in coordination with the other assaults that the United Nations forces are making on Germany.

The unfortunate fact is that the shift of General Marshall, when and if it comes, will have lost part of the psychological lift which it might have given the people because of the furor that unconfirmed reports have provoked. Delay has taken the edge off a first-class bit of psychological warfare. If that delay could not be avoided, the responsibility for this loss falls entirely upon loose-talking officials and the press. But if it could have been avoided, the responsibility falls also upon the President.

So many other facts that should have been given to the public promptly and frankly have been withheld that the Administration is naturally suspected of withholding news arbitrarily, even when it may have a good reason for doing so. The President left it for Mr. Churchill to reveal important facts about the American campaign in Italy and the Mediterranean. We waited weeks to receive from the President confirmation of Sumner Welles' resignation as Undersecretary of State. Meanwhile the air was filled with rumors, wild speculation and gossip that reacted against domestic morale as well as smooth relations with our Allies in this war. The repercussions of that episode could have been notably toned down by supplanting rumor with news that the public has a right to hear. We believe that the results of this hush-hush policy are its own condemnation. Certainly the press would be less avid in its pursuit of rumors and speculation if the Administration followed a consistent policy of releasing promptly the news to which the people are unquestionably entitled.

Banking Risks

The annual reports of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation have always provided food for thought and meat for controversy to students of banking. The report just published covering operations for 1942 is no exception to the rule, for it expresses some firm convictions as to the necessity of risk-taking if the private banking system is to survive. It may seem strange for an agency established for the purpose of insuring depositors in private commercial banks against loss to maintain such a thesis. But the FDIC covers itself against charges of inconsistency by pointing out that under the deposit insurance system bank stockholders bear the first risk of loss from unsound banking practices. They are wiped out before the FDIC comes to the rescue. Consequently, self-interest "still provides the primary incentive for the sound management and operation of the bank and for prudence in the extension of credit."

The question of the extent to which private banking should be insured against loss has been a warm issue for a good many years. The war has, however, made it really hot, largely because our private commercial banks have been called upon by the Government itself to invest billions of dollars in Government securities. The result is that the capital reserves out of which losses have to be met are a steadily declining proportion of the value of bank assets and considerably below customary standards of adequacy. For the duration of the war the banks need not worry, because their Government holdings are readily convertible into cash without risk of loss. The FDIC is looking forward, however, to the postwar period when, it points out, banks will not be able to assume the reasonable risks incidental to financing industry, unless they possess adequate capital and reserves out of which to meet the losses that are inseparable from enterprise.

The alternative to taking such risks, obviously, is to set up some Government corporation or use some existing Government agency to insure banks against loss on certain types of assets. Such insurance has already been provided for various types of loans, notably loans against real estate. The unusual conditions of wartime have also made it necessary to insure private banks against loss on loans to war contractors for provision for working capital. In many cases, no soundly managed banks could be expected to provide the funds needed in the amounts required. The Government either has to do the financing or agree to cover the extraordinary risks of the credit operation.

Since maximum production is our aim, loans of the type now guaranteed by the Army and the Navy are well adapted to the requirements of the times. However, this kind of insured loan might become so attractive, because of its almost "riskless" character, as to strengthen demands for an expansion and extension of Government-guaranteed loans after the war. With such possibilities in mind, no doubt, the FDIC reminds the banks that risk-taking provides the justification for the profits of private enterprise. Furthermore, if the function of risk-taking is shifted to the Government by comprehensive insurance of bank assets, the banks must expect to be subjected to more and more governmental restraints and interference with the conduct of their business.

In New Guinea

In the days when an Allied force in New Guinea was inching its way through the jungles toward Buna and Gona and American troops were blasting the Japanese out of the corner of Guadalcanal, the magnitude of the task facing us in the Pacific seemed appalling. Nor, for that matter, can we afford to assume that the struggle against the Japanese will at any stage prove easy or effortless. But if Japan remains a formidable enemy, she does not appear to be anything like as formidable as she appeared to be a year or 18 months ago.

By way of proof, there is the experience the Allies have had in New Guinea. A long period of trial and torment preceded the capture of Buna and Gona. Progress in the direction of Salamaua was more rapid although still slow. But Lae fell quickly and now the bloody battle for Finschhafen, which began not very many days ago, is approaching a climax. In the meantime, our air power has been delivering very heavy blows against the enemy. At Wewak, last Monday, for instance, Allied bombers and fighters destroyed more than 60 Japanese planes. In addition, three tankers and four merchant vessels were sunk. It is true that even after Finschhafen has been captured and even after the entire northern as well as eastern coasts of New Guinea are in our hands, we shall still be far from Tokyo. But it is enormously encouraging that the momentum of our advance is increasing as are the number and force of the blows we are delivering to the enemy. We have still a long way to go. But we are definitely on our way.

Books For Soldiers

During the coming year close to 20 million books will be shipped to men in the Army and Navy stationed in all parts of the world. The new Armed Services Edition consists of compact paperbound volumes said to weigh about one-sixth as much as the clothbound originals. This reduction in size and bulk is a highly important consideration because it permits more books to be packed into a limited storage space.

But quantity is not the only or even the most important feature of this new book supply service; the character of the selections determines whether the books will serve a useful purpose or be just so much waste paper. In this case there is every reason to suppose that few mistakes will be made, since the books will be selected by publishers and authors, aided by librarians and booksellers, in cooperation with the Council on Books in Wartime.

Books donated to the services by the public satisfy a real need, and contributors should be encouraged to continue the good work. But voluntary donations of books from the family library cannot in the nature of the case meet the demand for current publications, nor satisfy the requirements of men with widely different tastes and interests, and differing intellectual grasp. Experience in dealing with the reading public is essential to provide the kind of books that our Army and Navy find readable, for purposes of diversion, instruction or plain entertainment.

SOLDIER'S RETURN

I live two years in one—in the slow sheaf
Of hours turned down that make the marching days,
Full of the camp life, laughter, southern leaf,
And tall marsh grass spread out against the haze.

My muscles answer the commands at dawn:
I hear the boys with many thoughts that talk.
And there are schedules that go spurring on
The courses that I work and plan and walk.

Speak of that other year—and this I know:
It stems the mind's strong currents one by one,
A roar of days in northern warmth and snow,
That memory shows with its unfailing sun.
I live two lives: the mind makes its life sure
And shades the second one that I endure.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Suburban Malady

I AM ONE of the tens of thousands of suburban Washingtonians who fail to exercise the rights and responsibilities of citizenship where they live.

For nearly four years my home has been in nearby Virginia, yet I have never voted there. Instead, I have been voting by absentee ballot in a city three thousand miles away.

Residents of the District, who are treated as children, criminals and institutionalized idiots as far as self-government is concerned, have no choice except to vote elsewhere—if they can. But at least 250,000 residents of metropolitan Washington live in nearby Maryland and Virginia, where voting rights are not proscribed. And it is safe to say that a majority of us are not registered voters where we live. We are second-class citizens—by choice!

As residents of the suburbs, we do not hesitate to criticize our local communities. We are, in fact, very fond of griping about everything from poor bus service to lack of city planning.

Criticize the County

In Arlington, we criticize the county for its failure to build more adequate through streets, install more street lights and the like. Many of us have heard—and a few know from personal experience—that the Arlington County jail is dirty, overcrowded, and a disgrace to the community. We complain that parks and playgrounds are conspicuous mainly by their absence.

Perhaps most serious of all our grievances is that the schools are inadequate. Arlington County grew in population from 26,000 in 1930 to 57,000 in 1940—faster than any place of its size (or larger) in the Nation. With the war and the opening of the Pentagon Building the rate of growth has been more rapid than ever. Arlington's population is now estimated at—hold your breath—108,000.

The result: The schools are literally filled to overflowing. The lower grades operate in split shifts; children are hauled long distances to schools with more room; classes are held in basements, and teachers' salaries are so low that it is difficult to get and keep good teachers in these days of high pay in war industries. And little is being done to correct these conditions.

Of course, there are many compensations in the suburbs, or we wouldn't be living there. Not the least of these are the grass, trees, and space for outdoor living which are hard to find in town. In Arlington, the fact that there is only one local government—the county—helps to keep real estate taxes comparatively low. And accessibility to downtown Washington without serious traffic congestion is a great asset.

Attendant Responsibility

But that is beside the point, which is that we suburbanites are fond of accepting the benefits and griping about the bad points of our semidetached existence, without accepting any of the attendant responsibilities.

In 1940, only about 7000 votes were cast in Arlington County. This was only 12 per cent of the total population, compared to 38 per cent in the Nation as a whole. There are several reasons for this, though none of them hold water:

1. Most Washingtonians—including suburbanites—are campers, psychologically speaking. We may live here for years, but our hearts still belong to Boston, Chicago, Topeka or San Jose. This residential schizophrenia is most unhealthful, and should be modified.

2. Some Federal workers are afraid that under the civil service system, legal residence may influence job security (Virginia and Maryland, like the District, are heavily over-represented in the Government service.) But this is an error—job tenure is not influenced by present place of residence.

3. Many Virginians object to paying a poll tax. But most of us who are nonvoters have already paid out "capitation taxes" along with our income and personal property taxes. We had to, in fact.

All of which leads up to this: On November 2, 1943, elections are to be held for all local offices in Arlington County. To vote, one must have registered by October 2—that is, by next Saturday. By Monday of this week only 650 new names had been added at the central registry; but the registrar will be waiting at the courthouse every day this week, on Friday from 7 to 9 p. m., and on Saturday until sundown, in fact.

I, for one, intend to register as a voter before the deadline. If I fail, may I be struck dumb when I criticize a local administration which I voted neither for nor against on election day.

Political Integrity

The Post is to be enthusiastically congratulated for its stand on the Federal Communications Commission investigation currently being prosecuted by Congress.

To remain apathetic toward the continued existence of a condition which so blatantly defies the principle of political integrity upon which this Nation was founded is certainly a form of moral insanity.

Fortress Sans Roof

By Barnet Nover

The Air Power Factor Again

THE GERMAN FORTRESS, as President Roosevelt recently reminded us, is not only surrounded by a wall that is vulnerable at a number of points but also lacks a roof.

This lack of a roof over Festung Europa is for the Germans the overshadowing fact in the military situation. They know that unless they can find some way to counteract Allied air power, more and more German cities will suffer the fate of Hamburg until German industry and transportation will break down, with catastrophic consequences for their military machine.

So Hitler and the German high command are prepared to make great sacrifices in order to gain time in which to build up the Reich's aerial defenses.

ALREADY the Germans have cut down their production of bombers, the weapon upon which they placed such great reliance in the early years of the war. They are now concentrating on the production of fighters.

In the meantime, they also found it necessary to reduce their air force on the Eastern Front to the barest minimum in order to provide aerial protection for their exposed cities in the west as well as an air cover for their forces in the Mediterranean.

In addition, Hitler invested a very considerable number of men and a vast quantity of materiel in the effort to keep the Allies as far as possible removed from Austria and south Germany.

THE IMPORTANCE which Hitler has attached to keeping Italy in the war, even after the Italians had lost all desire to remain in the war, even after the Italian government had surrendered to the Allies, is very revealing in this connection.

This surrender and the dispatch of German forces to southern Italy that followed occurred, it will be remembered, at a time when the German army was in a state of full retreat on the Eastern Front, abandoning one after another such vital centers as Orel, Belgorod, Kharkov, Taganrog, Bryansk, Smolensk and Novorossisk.

A YEAR AGO Hitler had stripped his strength in the west in order to make possible his advance across the Donets and Don to the Caucasus and Russia's Volga lifeline. In other words, he was willing to sacrifice Cologne and Essen in order to acquire Rostov and Stalingrad.

Today, however, his strategy is the exact reverse. He is abandoning foreign territory acquired at a tremendous cost in order to give his home base at least some measure of protection. Nor has that exchange been wholly futile.

It is true that the proportional increase in German air power in the west has not prevented the R. A. F. and the American Air Force from dealing out terrific punishment to German cities—the latest being Hannover.

But it is also true that Allied air losses resulting from these raids have been rising both absolutely and proportionate to the numbers of bombers employed.

What we may be seeing in present-day air war is that familiar military phenomenon of defense catching up with offense. The fact that our bombers still get through is proof that this catching-up process is not complete. But we cannot delude ourselves with the idea that the German defense against air attack will not some day be the match for our offensive capacity. Both sides are engaged in a race with time.

IT IS IN THIS connection that the fighting in Italy is of special importance.

The acquisition by the Allies of air bases in the Po Valley would bring our bombers within easier range of Munich and Vienna than they are today within range of Hamburg, Cologne and the Ruhr from British bases.

The expulsion of the Germans from the Po Valley, therefore, would thus have a doubly destructive effect on the German position. It would, in the first place, result in the creation of more Hamburgs, some of them industrial centers which have so far been spared heavy bombing raids. And, secondly, it would compel the Germans to spread their defensive air power—their fighter force, antiaircraft crews and ack-ack—still further.

As a result of the Allied seizure of the great Italian airfield of Foggia and its constellation of satellite fields, a most important victory, we are now only 600 miles by air from the oil refineries of Ploesti, less than 500 miles from Munich and Vienna and within fighter range of the Yugoslav coast across the Adriatic.

But it will not be until we are pressing up against the Alps will we be in a position to force a maximum dispersion of German air strength.

Also, if we are to bomb Germany from Britain and Italy with the force needed effectively to weaken and ultimately to destroy Germany's fighting capacity, and to do so before Germany's defenses against aerial assault become formidable, we must have a far greater plane production than we now have.

It is true that we are producing more planes than any other nation has ever produced. But great as is that production it is not yet fully adequate for our global needs. More planes are needed if Germany is not to be vouchsafed time to put a roof over the fortress and in so doing lengthen the duration of the war.

Representative Cox

It takes a great deal to move me to express my feelings in writing, particularly feelings about something I see printed in a newspaper. But I have never seen anything which so perfectly put into words a lot of jumbled, wrathful feelings as I have felt about the state of affairs in our House of Representatives, as your public letter to Speaker Rayburn, published in today's Post. Mr. Cox's Georgia variation of the old rotten Tammany technique is a horrible example of what I feel the House will become infected with. If the individual members don't rouse themselves to the point where they will expel those among them who use their intelligence only for their personal and financial aggrandizement and the extermination of those who become their enemies by reason of a decent devotion to duty.

I want to thank you for having used your personal influence to expose the most tragic shortcoming of both citizens and civil servants in Washington today.

LIEUTENANT.
Fort Belvoir, Va., Sept. 27.

Just a line of congratulation and thanks for your Cox editorial. A marked distinction is to be made between grousing about things which are not as they should be and the fearless and unequivocal laying down of the moral law as applied to public issues. In the political life of this day a simple ringing statement such as yours clears the atmosphere.

It takes moral stature to write as you do and thank God you have it. MORRIS L. COOK.

Milk Subsidies

As an economist, I am provoked to rebuke the criticism of milk subsidies which appeared in the letter by Laura K. Pollock in this morning's Post.

If everyone paid equal taxes and consumed equal amounts of milk, a subsidy would simply add the costs of its administration to the consumer's expense. No such happy equality exists. The rich contribute a proportionally greater share of their income in taxes and bond purchases than the poor. And food cost alone may take as much as half of an underprivileged family's income.

Thus, a Government subsidy program for milk assures the farmer of his "necessary price," draws its funds in the main from those best able to pay, and contributes the proportionately greatest saving to those workingman families least able to afford that vitally protective food.

First Skirmish

The New Deal has already won the first skirmish in the vitally important political campaign against monopoly. This victory came in the form of an announcement, recently made by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, which had participated before the war in an international cartel agreement with the big Nazi chemical trust known as I. G. Farbenindustrie, that it was opposed for the future to any international cartel agreements that would tend to raise prices above competitive levels.

Vice President Wallace has been leading the fight against monopoly and secret international cartel agreements to strengthen monopolies in the postwar world. This announcement by the largest of the Standard Oil companies is an indication that the wiser capitalist leaders believe that public opinion will back the New Deal in its struggle to keep down prices by preventing monopoly in the future.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Little Elbert"—A Drama Of Any Home

"I want you to see Elbert; he's a dear. Just 5 years old next week," said Mrs. Twitchell as her old friend, Grace Tooker, called. "Elbert!" yelled Mrs. Twitchell. "Oh, El-l-bert-t-t!"

There was no answer, beyond something strangely like Choctaw screams among the shrubs. Mrs. Twitchell called again, and after a while Elbert appeared. He was immediately preceded by a crash of glass, as an old tin can full of stones came through the window and landed at Miss Tooker's feet.

"Hand grenade!" exclaimed Little Elbert as he rushed in, grinning triumphantly.

"Elbert, this is Miss Tooker," began Mrs. Twitchell.

"You're dead!" declared the child, addressing that lady and pointing to what he had explained was a deadly weapon.

"Isn't he cute!" said the visitor.

"Bang! Bang!" barked Elbert. "I got you right between the eyes."

"Now, Elbert, where are your manners?" asked Mrs. Twitchell.

"Boom!" yelled the child, pointing some curious contraption at his mother. "Watch out! It's a bazooka! You're both dead now. Boom! Boom!"

"Stop it, child! Miss Tooker isn't dead and neither am I."

"You'd better get back into those foxholes," insisted Elbert. "Brr-rr-buzz-z-z-whrr-rr-rr! Bombers away!"

"Elbert Twitchell, stop that nonsense this minute!" ordered Mrs. Twitchell sternly. "You're in the house now."

"Wham-m-m! Bam-m! House is gone. Direct hit," said Elbert.

Mrs. Twitchell finally got him by an ear and made the child shake hands with Miss Tooker.

"Isn't he a fine little man!" said Miss Tooker, unconvincingly.

"Whish-ss-sh!" hissed the child, pulling a piece of hose from his belt and pointing it at both women. "Fall down! It's liquid fish-h! You'll all burn up. Whish-ss-sh!"

"He goes on like that all the time," sighed Mrs. Twitchell.

"I know how it is," said Miss Tooker, who felt somewhat battle-worn. "There are three little boys next door to our house, and they took Salerno 48 hours ahead of the Army. One of them broke a leg last week jumping off the barn with a tablecloth for a parachute."

"All they think of is Commando stuff," said Mrs. Twitchell. "Elbert tells us he isn't Elbert Twitchell, he's Elbert Mountbatten."

"Just 5 years old this week, eh?" mused Miss Tooker.

"On Tuesday."

"I must send him a birthday present."

"I bought him two lovely children's books, 'Triumph Through Fire Power' and 'Skill With the Bayonet.'"

"I saw one in the bookstore window he'll love," said Miss Tooker.

"What was it?"

"'How to Cripple an Adversary at Close Range'," said Miss Tooker.

"Ack-ack-ack! Bang! Bang!" came echoing from the back yard. "Ack-ack-ack!"

* * * *

It is easy to understand why Hitler took so much trouble to rescue Mussolini. He had to have somebody to talk to at Brenner Pass.

It was Harry Durant, the Sage of Guilford, who, losing a poker pot on two 10s, said, "I was just coming in on a wing and a pair."

"When Hess landed in England he gave the name of Alfred Horn"—Anthony Eden. "Trader Horn," as it turned out.

It seems that Hess said that Hitler would let England survive if it made peace with him at once. England's reply, you will recall, was "Thanks for the offer, and if anything ever comes of it the jailer will let you know."

Alas, The Germans Know

Mr. Churchill, in his September 21 speech, makes this extraordinary confession about Badoglio: "We knew nothing about this new regime." That is, no one in authority in London (or in Washington either) realized that the greatest soldier in Italy, the incarnation to every Italian of anti-Fascism and of pro-Ally sentiment, the man whom Mussolini had thrown into virtual imprisonment but whose popularity was so great that he did not dare banish him—that this friend of the Allies had seized the power and that his dearest wish would be for immediate aid to drive the hated Germans out of Italy.

It is unnecessary to review the melancholy story of the gradual realization of this truth by the Allies. But there is a lesson to be learned. There are in England and the United States scores of men who through long experience know the political situation in Hungary, Rumania, Greece, Bulgaria, and who could immediately inform our military authorities about the character of whatever change may occur in those countries. Have these men been sought out, so that they may be at once available? The Germans obviously act on exact knowledge without delay. Are we always to be too late, as in this case?

John Quinn, the brains of Tammany Hall, used to tell his young aides: "There is no satisfactory substitute for knowledge. For a while you can get along, you can bluff it out, but eventually you run up against the man who knows. And then you realize there is no satisfactory substitute for knowledge." Alas, the Germans know.

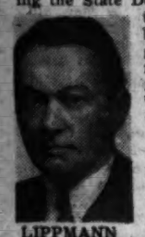
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Stettinius And The State Department

THE APPOINTMENT of Mr. Stettinius is a beginning, but only the beginning, towards making the State Department equal to its responsibilities. It is a good appointment because it is a promise that the department is to be strengthened by recruiting men of experience from the outside and by promoting men who have been held back by the routine of seniority.



LIPPMANN

THE NEED to strengthen the Department is denied by few who are informed about it. But the importance and the urgency of strengthening the Department is perhaps not generally appreciated. Mr. Mark Sullivan, for example, concedes that "some criticism of the Department has come from sincere and disinterested sources." But he is so concerned about the "ideological" criticism, much of it untrue, unfair, and irresponsible, that he does not stop to examine the sincere and disinterested criticism.

Yet the fact is that if the Department were strong enough to cope with the real issues of our foreign policy, it would not be nearly so vulnerable to the other sort of criticism.

If the State Department were so organized and so manned that it formed clear and adequate policy, there would not have been half a dozen conflicting lines of action improvised here, there, and everywhere. Nor is there any use saying that the President makes our foreign policy. If the State Department were as strong as the War Department, the President would make our foreign policy with the firm and continual guidance and advice of his diplomatic advisers. He makes our strategy with the guidance and advice of our best military minds.

WE HAVE a critical example of the trouble in the delicate, indeed explosive, affair of the Tydings resolution to give immediate independence to the Philippine Islands though they are occupied by the Japanese enemy. Senator Tydings announces that he has introduced his resolution with the approval of President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull, and President Quezon. But there is good reason for thinking that his resolution is a misunderstanding of the intention of our government, and that it was not drafted by American officials nor approved by them before Senator Tydings introduced it. The misunderstanding undoubtedly is in good faith. But what a way to conduct foreign affairs it is to have a misunderstanding about a matter of such gravity.

For there is no disguising the gravity of it. President Quezon is in Washington. But his government is in Manila, and this government is collaborating with the Japanese under a Japanese constitution which recognizes the sovereign independence of the Philippines. Now Senator Tydings proposes that we follow the Japanese initiative and recognize that the Philippines are already independent before General MacArthur recovers them. If we do this, and the "independent" government in Manila says we must not come back, or like the "independent" governments in Burma and Thailand, even declares war against us, which is far from unlikely, just where will we be? Where will President Quezon be? Where will our real friends in the Philippines be if we renounce them before they are liberated from the Japanese? And what will we do if we find that this "independent" government exercises its sovereign right to oust us entirely from the far Pacific, and not to play its part in the settlement of the Pacific?

I SUBMIT that a proper State Department would have been on the job from the start, aware and alert, and ready to lay down a consistent policy on the Philippines, and then to control its application. It would have seen to it that Senator Tydings introduced a resolution which really expresses our purposes and our needs. But the fact is that the Department did not do this, and that is why we have stumbled into this muddle.

What is the good of talking about "ideology," as if angry articles in the Nation and PM were of cosmic significance, and of creating a myth about the Department's being beset by ideologists, when what is wanting is knowledge, judgment, and wise consideration of intensely practical and the most vital American interests?

THE CONDUCT of foreign policy requires something more than the reiteration of generalities about independence, sovereignty, international law. It calls for a firm, practical, and informed judgment of how to deal with particular issues and events in accord with an enlightened and civilized conception of the national interest. And that is what the State Department is not yet organized and manned to do.

And it will never be organized and manned to do it during this war, and in time to make a settlement commensurate with our needs and our sacrifices, if we encourage the complacent and dangerous view that because the Department is unfairly criticized, it does not really need to pay attention to serious criticism.

FOR THESE reasons the appointment of Mr. Stettinius is good if it marks the beginning of a most necessary rejuvenation and reformation. The first problem is not how to get harmony among bureaucratic factions, though a severe discipline is much needed. The first problem is to improve the Department by recruitment and promotion so as to bring to the front and to the top, at the level where policy is formed, more men of greater eminence and surer judgment of affairs.

Middle East Policy Shifted By Arabian Oil

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Washington Bureau of the Chicago Sun

The United States last night appeared to be embarking on a more positive policy toward the Middle East as the State Department prepared to receive a call today from representatives of Saudi Arabia, site of the largest unexploited petroleum pool in the world.

Marking the first time in history that Saudi Arabian representatives have called formally in this country, his Royal Highness Amir Faisal, foreign minister of Saudi Arabia and second living son of Ibn Saud, will arrive at the State Department today. He will be accompanied by his brother, his Royal Highness Amir Khalid and by Shaikh Hafix-Wabea, Saudi Arabian Minister to London.

State Department officials, minimizing the significance of the visit, described the impending arrival as merely a "friendly call on the part of the son of the ruler of a friendly nation."

That explanation, however, ignored the fact that beneath Saudi Arabia lie oil deposits which experts say dwarf even the great east Texas pool which up to last July had produced 1,884,000,000 barrels of petroleum. And it also ignored the fact that President Roosevelt last May and June sent his personal representative, Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, into Saudi Arabia for conferences with Ibn Saud to solidify the concession by which American oil companies have insured that when this tremendous pool is tapped the United States will have exclusive rights to its production.

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

American diplomatic and economic operations in the Middle East have been privately but bitterly criticized by some officials here as completely subordinated to British interests. One faction contended that the Middle East supply center at Cairo, by which priorities on all goods moving into the Middle East are allocated, was yielding to Great Britain total leadership over the Middle East and Near East to the detriment of America's essential interests.

Mr. Roosevelt was understood to have been meeting this criticism in part when he recently named James M. Landis, former Director of Civilian Defense, as American representative to head the Middle East Supply Center (MESC) with the rank of minister. He was meeting it further last spring when he sent Hurley to the Arabian capital at Riyadh for the secret conferences with Ibn Saud.

The story of Hurley's mission can not yet be told in full. The big, white haired American general, it was learned, donned Arab robes and with his staff journeyed over the Arabian deserts for a friendly week's talk with Ibn Saud. As a result of these talks, the concession whereby Saudi Arabian oil may be exploited by the California-Arabian Standard Oil Co., owned jointly by Standard Oil of California and the Texas Co., was solidified and American relations with the Ibn Saud government were rendered more intimate.

The visit of Faisal, it was understood, was an outgrowth of this conference. Under the MESC system, Saudi Arabian officials routinely would deal with MESC in procuring priorities for shipment of materials and machinery into the country for development, and thus American influence in the area would be dissipated by the fact such deals go through Anglo-American administrative channels.

By sending Hurley directly to Ibn Saud and inviting the foreign minister to this country, Mr. Roosevelt obviously was putting the imprint of American influence unmistakably over the fabulous oil reserves of little known Arabia.

Plans Made To Aid Small Businessmen

Chairman Robert W. Johnson of the Smaller War Plants Corporation stated in his seventh bimonthly report to WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson yesterday that the agency has established potentially productive arrangements with various Government procurement agencies which will benefit small business.

Johnson also stressed that small plants will increasingly share in more business as the Office of Civilian Requirements determines what further production is necessary for essential civilian needs. He declared that small plants are the logical contenders for this type of business as they generally have not converted to specialized war work.

The report showed that in the period from June 6 to July 31 the total value of subcontracts arranged by the corporation from contractors other than the corporation was $35,597,000. As a prime contractor itself, the corporation awarded to small plants subcontracts amounting to $3,042,826.

SWPC, in addition, assisted directly in placing through Armed Service Procurement Offices $217,733,000 in prime contracts among 2526 small prime contractors, 1285 of which had not previously received assistance from the corporation, the report stated.

Other work included the placing of $6,756,690 worth of authorized loans and leases to 176 applicants in the small business field.

Looking ahead to postwar adjustments, Johnson said that it would be desirable to enact legislation to allow small plants to set up surplus funds large enough to tide them over the period of postwar conversion and uncertainties.

He stressed that the plight of small business must be studied in any plans for reconverting war industries and the economy to peace activities.

Last Payment For Mexican Oil Lands Set

The State Department made public last night an agreement whereby Mexico will pay American nationals $20,137,700.84, in addition to the nine million dollars in cash paid in 1941, in the final settlement for expropriation of oil properties in 1938.

Oil companies had set the value of their properties in hundreds of millions of dollars but the valuation was cut by a commission of experts.

The payments will begin today with a remittance of $3,796,391.04, and the balance will be paid in four annual installments of $4,085,327.45 each.

The department announced the agreement has been reached through an exchange of notes by Adolf Berle, jr., acting Secretary of State, and Rafael de la Colina, Mexican charge d'affaires.

The total of $29,137,700.84 represents $23,595,991 plus $5,141,709.84 interest at three per cent on all unpaid balances from March 18, 1938, to September 30, 1947, the date set for the final payment.

The first payment of nine million dollars was made on November 19, 1941, when the two governments agreed to appoint experts to determine the just compensation to be paid for the oil properties. The experts, Morris L. Cooke, for the United States, and Manuel J. Zevada for Mexico, determined the evaluation in a report on April 17, 1942.

OPA Hearings To Probe Food Distribution

By the Associated Press

A Nation-wide complaint session has been arranged by the Government to find out directly from retailers and wholesalers what, if anything, is interferring with the fair distribution of foods and civilian goods.

Interviews will be held by representatives of the Office of Civilian Requirements (OCR) and the War Food Administration (WFA) in 20 selected cities, accessible to every merchant, between October 11 and 30.

Merchants will be allowed 15 minutes each to tell what obstacles appear to be preventing them from getting enough goods to meet their customers' needs. If certain patterns appear consistently in the interviews, OCR and WFA will seek corrective action.

Officials suspect, for example, that some manufacturers have not adjusted their delivery quotas among regions to match wartime population shifts, so that boom communities are getting insufficient supplies.

Some of the other possible trouble spots include:

Shortages of boxes and paper products for packaging some items which themselves are not scarce; transportation difficulties; the inability of a store to get a new supplier when his original wholesaler or manufacture goes out of business; the occasional practice of requiring a dealer to take a certain amount of goods he doesn't want in order to get some he does want.

By charting such changes in normal trade practices, officials say they hope to get a picture of "the effectiveness of the civilian distributive system under wartime conditions." Similar inquires will be conducted among producers and the results dovetailed with the dealer interviews.

Merchants will be requested to write to the local WPB official in charge asking for an interview and indicating a convenient time. Written statements may supplement the 15-minute interviews.

Stocks Fall Off

Rationing Of Sugar To Continue

By Watson Fenimore
International News Service Staff Writer

Despite recent increased allotments to industrial users, home consumers were warned last night that there is no prospect that sugar will be removed from rationing in the near future.

Increasing transportation difficulties on the East Coast and an estimated decrease of half a million tons in this year's Western sugar beet harvest are combining to keep down the Nation's sugar stocks, Federal experts said.

Sugar Supply Lower

Latest sugar supply figures show that the United States had only 1,271,889 short tons on hand beginning in August as compared to 1,148,586 tons a year ago, although Caribbean shipping has improved.

The greater figure in 1942, a food distribution administration spokesman revealed, was due to large amounts of beet sugar which are not in prospect for this year.

Rationing of sugar began in May, 1942, and householders now are allowed approximately five pounds per person every 2½ months. Hopes were expressed that sugar might also become ration-free when coffee was taken off the restricted list of foods last July. But any increase in sugar supplies which may occur will go first to industrial firms. The public will be the last to get more than at present.

Firms Received More

The recent increased allocations to commercial firms was made, one Federal representative said, when water movement of raw sugar from Cuba was at its brightest this summer.

Industrial men were given an across-the-board increase from 70 to 80 per cent of their 1941 tonnage. Canners of fruits and vegetables were allowed an increase to 100 per cent of their 1941 usage, so as to up the production of their products, and makers of jams and jellies were given an increase to 120 per cent to make more breadspread and bakery products available.

Imports of Cuban sugar to Florida now have been cut down, however, because Eastern railroads have been unable to supply overland transportation for the raw product to refineries in the North.

'A' Gas Ration Boost for East Is Predicted

By the Associated Press

The basic gasoline ration in the East is going to be boosted to two gallons a week, informed sources said last night. The present allowance for an "A" card holder is one and a half gallons weekly.

Just how soon the larger ration will become effective was not known, but an announcement of the increase may be made tomorrow by War Mobilization Director Byrnes.

The adjustment represents a compromise. The Office of Price Administration sought to raise the ration to three gallons weekly, authoritative sources said, to bring the East's rations in line with those in the Midwest. The Petroleum Administration for War countered, they reported, that there was not sufficient gasoline for this but did consent to an increase to two gallons.

Retailoring B and C Rations

Part of the increase, it was said, will be made possible through allocation of more gasoline to the East. In addition, OPA is retailoring "B" and "C" rations in the East in the expectation of squeezing out extra gasoline.

Interior Secretary Ickes, as petroleum administrator, announced several months ago that an effort would be made to equalize rations in the East and Midwest. Since that time, the Midwest "A" ration has been trimmed from 4 to 3 gallons weekly.

Representative Brown (Republican) of Ohio yesterday told a meeting of Midwestern Congressmen that he had been informed reliably that an order cutting the Midwestern ration to 2 gallons weekly already had been prepared by OPA, but has been delayed pending the PAW's new allotments of gasoline. OPA officials declined comment on Brown's statement.

The legislators adopted a resolution urging Congress to make a full-scale investigation of oil and gas rationing, prices, consumption and distribution.

"You aren't going to solve this problem as long as we have the present bureaucratic setup," declared Representative Busby (Republican), Illinois. . . . The whole things should be scrapped."

Said Brown:

"This bureaucratic bungling goes on while we are faced with this situation: There isn't an American who objects to necessary rationing, but what is necessary? It may be that bureaucratic bungling itself created the gasoline shortage."

Selective Service Asks School Aid to Instruct U. S. Illiterates

Draft-age illiterates will go to school to learn how to read and write sufficiently well to pass military induction tests under a new Selective Service program announced yesterday.

Local school officials throughout the country will be asked to hold classes to teach illiterate draft registrants to read and write.

"When a plan for literacy classes has been established in a community," Selective Service said, "local boards will direct illiterate registrants to report to selected meeting places for the purpose of determining the levels of their educational skills. At these meetings, the registrants may be tested with such devices as are provided by school officials, and those registrants who do not possess at least fourth grade reading and writing skills should enroll in classes."

Officials acknowledged that local draft boards had no local authority to force a registrant to attend classes, but it was pointed out that arrangements could be made to have recalcitrants inducted and sent to Army literacy schools.

Illiteracy as such, it was pointed out, is no longer a cause for rejection by the Army because intelligence tests have been substituted for literacy tests since June 1, but officials said that literate persons had a better chance to pass the intelligence test at an armed forces induction station.

Due to the change, many registrants rejected as illiterates before June 1 may now become acceptable to the armed forces.

Selective Service said that the armed forces would train registrants who pass the intelligence test to read and write, but because their facilities are limited, it was decided to establish preinduction classes as well.

Selective Service developed the plan in cooperation with the United States Office of Education.

"The substantial reduction of illiteracy would be an important contribution to the war effort generally," Selective Service said. "It would save the time of the armed forces in providing special training for illiterate registrants accepted for service, and materially reduce the number of registrants rejected for failure to pass the intelligence tests at the induction station."

Negro USO Club To Open New D. C. Service Quarters

A Negro USO club, which will be one of the largest centers for servicemen and war workers in the District, will open within two months at 2011 Georgia ave. nw., adjoining Washington baseball park.

The proposed center is the gift of Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, who purchased the property from the Goodwill Industries, which will reoccupy the quarters after the war.

Final leases for the two-story building, which was presented to the USO after officials had long sought spacious quarters in a convenient location, were signed this week. Renovations will begin next week.

The new USO will be operated jointly by the YMCA and the YWCA, both of which have been operating supplementary facilities at their Negro branches for the past two years.

Facilities will be available for dancing, games and refreshments, while informantion services will be provided on available lodging, religious and entertainment institutions. The programs at the new USO will be integrated with schedules at other nearby clubs.

Algiers Radio Says Hitler Flays Generals

London, Sept. 29 (AP).—Radio France of Algiers, quoting the so-called German "freedom" station Atlantic, said today that Adolf Hitler had reopened a conference of German marshals and generals for a "Stalingrad psychosis" which he said influenced their strategy.

This broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, placed the scene of the conference as the headquarters of Field Marshal Fritz Erich von Mannstein.

Natives Quit Munda for Good; U. S. Welcome to It, Says Chief

By Rembert James
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wanawana Island, Sept. 17 (Delayed).—The chief of all the Munda tribes—they once were among the world's most ferocious warriors—has decided the Americans can keep Munda and all of New Georgia Island, from now on, if they want it.

"Too many battles there," explained the chief, 35-year-old black-skinned John Bitimbuli.

"All the natives are frightened by the noise of planes and bombs and shooting. We have moved here to a village we will call Maundu. It is beautiful here, and quiet. We will never go back to Munda."

Yanks Took Him Around in Jeep

"I went to Munda the other day, just to see," he continued. "All the beautiful trees were knocked down. There were great holes everywhere from shells and bombs. Hundreds of planes with the American star on them were taking off from a field on the spot where I was born.

"The Americans took me for a ride in a jeep—all around. I saw everything. It was terrible. I do not know whether I ever want to see Munda again."

John Bitimbuli spoke as we ate watermelon under a great spreading tropical tree. He spoke slowly, in perfect English learned at the old Munda mission school.

Once It Was Too Tame

He wore a yellow skirt, no shirt nor shoes, nor hat. The crown on his black woolly hair was pink, from lime he rubs on it daily.

"Years ago, when my father was chief," he continued, "the natives thought Munda was too tame. They went in canoes to Choiseul and Kolombangara and other islands and fought with the natives of those islands. Then the British came, and everything was the same for many years. Nothing ever happened.

"Then the Japanese came—only last year. Then the Americans came.

"The natives left when the Japanese came, because the Japanese do not smell good and the natives have good noses. The Americans say we can go back now. The Americans are good to us. But Munda is changed too much."

Nazis Hold 15-Mile Strip in Corsica

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 29 (AP).—The Germans no whold only a 15-mile strip along the east coast of Corsica, in the Bastia-Borgo-Folelli area, the French high command announced today.

The Nazis had speeded up their retreat from the strategic Mediterranean island, evacuating the mountainous area between Corte and the sea. Piedicroce, an important center of enemy resistance, was captured yesterday, the communique said.

Thomas Demands U.S. Plan Now for Returning Troops

By the Associated Press

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah urged last night adoption of plans during the war to take care of soldiers once peace is restored.

Asserting that it will take longer to achieve a return to normal ways than it has taken to prepare for war, Thomas declared it would be "a political crime not to plan" now for the welfare of veterans. He spoke on the Blue Network.

Anticipating that "our taxpayer associations" will protest the cost, he declared that if the Nation can afford "billions and billions" to destroy, "we can afford thousands and thousands of dollars to build up."

N.Y. OPA Warns Employes Against Taking Favors

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—The district OPA, with an eye perhaps on the approaching holiday season, cautioned officials and employes today against accepting gratuities or favors in connection with their OPA services.

"Favors," said staff memorandum No. 256, "may include many things other than money, such, for instance, as positions for relatives or friends; accommodations at hotels or clubs, tickets for theaters, prizefights, etc."

The OPA said violations would be cause for disciplinary action or removal.

Warners Are Unperturbed By Manpower Bugaboo

WHAT'S ALL THIS about Hollywood's being in a critical jam account the scarcity—especially among the males—of acting talent? The Warner Brothers think it's a lot of the old malarky.

Sticking their tongue out and thumbing their nose at the rest of the industry—or such as seem to merit the salute—the Burbank studios modestly call attention to the fact that their roster of acting personnel now is at an all-time peak.

ANN SHERIDAN

Listed among the expendables are 19 players of star rank, 43 featured players, 31 outstanding artists articled to appear in special pictures, 15 directors, 38 writers, four composers and 12 producers, operating under the supervision of Jack L. Warner, in charge of production.

An additional total of 28 men, representing all of these groups, now are in the armed services.

Virtually all of the 19 stars are currently at work. Humphrey Bogart, Sydney Greenstreet and Alexis Smith are in "Conflict;" Paul Henreid, Ida Lupino and Nancy Coleman are busy in "In Our Time;" Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning are costarred with Cary Grant in "Destination Tokyo," and Joan Leslie, fresh out of "This Is the Army" and "Thank Your Lucky Stars" (take a peek at the Earle's marquee) is paired with newcomer Robert Alda in "Rhapsody in Blue." Errol Flynn has just finished "Northern Pursuit" and Bette Davis is on deck, readying things for "Mr. Skeffington."

A new name on the Warner call sheet is that of Joan Crawford, recently signed after years and years and years of service on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Two stories are in preparation for her.

More than two-thirds of the 43 featured players are engaged with the stars in the above-mentioned films.

Phooey on the manpower shortage! Or did I just imagine I heard the Warner boys saying that?

Speaking of scarcities, shortages and the like, there will not be any noticeable on the local screens, despite the fact that the major producer-distributors are reducing the volume and speed of their feature releases by an approximate 25 per cent. This curtailment does not mean that they have not enough top-bracket productions to go around, but that they have too many. This is not so paradoxical as it sounds. The top-shelf pictures being as meritorious as they are, they are being held over for extended runs in practically every key release spot in the country—just as is the case here this weekend with only one new film being broken out. That reduces the demand and augments the supply. That celebrated "backlog," by now, ought to be about the size of the Washington Monument!

Surprise, Chagrin and Disappointment

With tears in his voice and a quiver in his eye, Manager Edmund Plohn of the National Theater, pecks out a note on his typewriter to the effect that Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play, "The Skin of Our Teeth," will not be coming along to E Street week after next. It is closing in Boston this Saturday night, owing to the firmness with which laryngitis has taken its grip on Gladys George, cast in the vital role of Sabina, created by Tallulah Bankhead and subsequently played by Miriam Hopkins.

Wrote Miss George to Producer Michael Myerberg: "My doctor advises me that if I continue to use my voice in its present condition I shall never be able to speak on the stage again. I must therefore advise you that I cannot continue in 'The Skin of Our Teeth' after Saturday, October 2. I must and will terminate my engagement on that date."

Mr. Myerberg has expressed his intention of resuming the tour, when as and if the piece can be suitably recast, but that does not relieve Mr. Plohn and his henchman from the tearful task of returning a ton or two of advance mail orders for the week of October 11. No substitute booking has as yet been determined upon.

Howard Wentworth, erstwhile director of the Cross Roads acting company and formerly on the staff of this journal, calls up exultantly to say that Sidney Bassler, once one of his mainstays over in the old Virginia barn and more recently a captain in the United States Army Air Forces stationed at Dayton, Ohio, has been called to New York for a place in Moss Hart's Air Forces show, "Winged Victory." That is another one the Capital won't see, account of because its multiple revolving stages are too heavy to handle, even on short jumps.

Not announced in time to catch yesterday's "Midweeks," it is still important to know that when "Destroyer" resumes its downtown run at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow, it will be supplemented by a new Warner Brothers two-reeler, "Women at War." Filmed in Technicolor at Fort Des Moines and dedicated to the WAC, "Women at War" has virtually an all-WAC cast, aided by only a few such Hollywood players as Fay Emerson and Robert Warwick. With full Government approval, this short is being shown to illustrate the magnificent job the WAC is doing and the urgent necessity for more and more women to join the ranks.

Tonight's the Night

Tonight will be a big night out in Rockville, Md. Sidney Lust's Milo Theater is holding its bond rally to raise a hoped-for and confidently expected $45,000 for the Third War Loan. The screen feature will be M-G-M's "Above Suspicion," preceded by special ceremonies, with Judge Woodward guest speaker of the evening. Neighbor Brooke Johns, former stage star, will be m. c., and Dick Mansfield will give his ever-popular chalk talk. The only way to get in is to buy a bond.

The Falls Church Community Theater is inaugurating its seventh season with an intensive drive for new members. Tryouts for "Ring Around Elizabeth" former Jane Cowl vehicle selected as first production of the new season, will be held in Madison School, in Falls Church, tonight at 8 o'clock. All and sundry cordially invited.

Time-and-Supply-Both-Growing-Short Note

If you haven't bought your bond for that "Midnight With the Stars" show at both the Earle and Capitol Theaters next Monday midnight, it's time to shake a leg—both of them, in fact. Victor Mature is the latest star added to the galaxy—in person!

singer, dancer and leader of her own rhumba band in top Manhattan and Miami Beach night clubs, now is exercising her versatility and magnetic appeal before the cameras at Universal—and in Technicolor. HEDDA HOPPER

So They Called It Off!

Hollywood, Sept. 29.—Hearing that Claudette Colbert and David Selznick weren't seeing eye to eye on "Since You Went Away," I dashed over to the studio. Though they're two of my best friends, I always like to be in on the kill if there's about to be one. I found them congratulating each other — Claudette praising him for the natural dialog he's written, he for the acting job she's now got her teeth into. Then I stayed to watch a couple of scenes and understood why things were so harmonious. The picture is as American as apple pie with rat-trap cheese, and it will be just as easy to digest. Dialog is the sort of thing that you and I use in our daily lives. No pomp, no bombast. It's just a mother and her kids trying to get on without husband and father, who was overage, yet felt that he must serve his country in its time of need.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Into her kitchen comes the owner of the village grocery, explaining why he had to bring the stuff himself. He couldn't get help. She asks whether he could give her a little time to pay her bill, 'cause she hasn't gotten the Government's monthly allotment, and she doesn't know quite how to manage things, but is learning. That gives him courage enough to talk about his son, a pilot who's back home for a couple of days before pushing on overseas. The scene is one of those warm, human, friendly things that every one of us in this country should be proud of.

Sound Thinking

I told David so, and he said, "In my youth, my father kept saying to us boys, 'thank your lucky stars every day you live that you were born Americans' " . . . Sometimes in our overzealousness to praise other countries and glorify them, we too often take our own for granted. We're a funny race. Many of us think it's a lot of sentimental slush to talk about our own. Why, for years we wouldn't believe any other folks than the Viennese knew how to waltz or could even write one. So it's about time we started putting America on the screen. We've done it in song, in comedy. Selznick's doing it with honest, tender emotion.

America's Sweetheart

Shirley Temple is happy to be back working after four years of school. She likes school, too, but she's an actress. Every night she calls her friends at school. They give her the school assignment for the next day. She works it out with her teacher on the set. She said, "You know, I'm an aunt now. Baby's 3 weeks old—a curly-headed bouncing boy." She'd like to go to Stanford some day because she thinks life there would be pretty exciting. Then, too, her brother went there . . . Her best friend, Phoebe Hearst, is now at Spence, in New York. She has invited Shirley back East for the Christmas holidays. Shirley would love to go to see snow, learn to ice skate, and also se the big town. She was there once in '38, but so surrounded by G-men she hardly saw anything. She loves dances, parties and the Canteen and says, "I've found the boys would rather talk than dance with me. Most of them have sisters at home, and I seem to take their place."

Repeat Performance

Remember Shirley's bedroom and how girls used to copy it when she was at Twentieth? Now she's almost sixteen, and her room in "Since You Went Away" will be copied, too. The wallpaper is plaid in beige and brown. The furniture is pine with a baby rocking chair, and beside it a miniature cabinet for knick-knacks. On her work table, cluttered with mementoes, is a frame of mounted butterflies . . . Shirley had a crying scene the other day—couldn't stop. It was exactly the thing that happened to her when her brother left for Hawaii. After saying goodby to him, she went home, looked at his picture on her bureau, and the floods came . . . The happiest woman on that set was Mrs. Temple, who's back in the groove.

'Round Town

Frances Langford and Jon Hall dining Mrs. Jimmy Doolittle and Col. Cliff Henderson in return for a dinner General Jimmy gave Frances in North Africa . . . Mary O'Brien, who's finished "When Ladies Fly," joins her sister Virginia in New York. They they're off to Texas to see brother Sergeant Jack, wounded overseas and ensconced in a hospital down there . . . Some welcome Jane Murfin got from the writing group at Paramount. She's doing "And Now Tomorrow" for Loretta Young and Susan Hayward . . . Bing Crosby is our latest to make a short for Canada's next war loan drive . . . Because of the shortage of leading men, our top band leaders will play in that baseball game between comics and leading men October 10. But they won't make up for loss of glamor, when Marlene Dietrich and Paulette Goddard view for first place—Dietrich in an oversexed white fox cape to her heels and Paulette in velvet panties.

No Reason to Count Coupons For Modern Movie Menus

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, Sept. 29.—If "food will win the war," it begins to appear in these parts as though old Brigadier General M. P. Industry will account for quite a few major military victories.

At this writing, 11 studios throughout Hollywood are filming 48 pictures with a dining scene of one proportion or another in each screen opus—yet the amount of food actually being consumed is hardly enough to satisfy the weekly needs of a listless canary.

And the nice thing about it is that the effort to save food is very evidently an honest, unselfish effort. No order has been issued at my studio to avoid excessive use of rationed foods in picture scenes lest wrathful film fans write scathing letters condemning the industry. The only order has been a universal one, to cut down the use of foodstuffs that more of the same may be diverted to proper public and military channels.

Shadow, But No Substance

There's a banquet scene in "The Iron Major," new RKO-Radio feature in which Pat O'Brien is starring as the late Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, famous Eastern football coach and World War I hero. The scene is laid in 1903, a year of peace, prosperity and plenty o' potatoes. But the groaning board groans only with the weight of goblets, glasses, decanters, wine bottles, silverware and flowers.

Prop Man George McGonigle placed on the table not one lonely nibble of food. Yet the bustling action of the scene—waiters pouring, guests "h'isting," laughter, conversation—creates a definite illusion that the inner man is receiving proper consideration.

Script of the same film originally called for a big picnic sequence, with scores of couples under the shady old oaks of Massachusetts. Obviously, a big picnic means many, many hampers of luscious viands spread before the hungry outdoor nature lovers. Director Ray Enright got around that one slick as grease.

He rearranged the scene so that Pat O'Brien and Ruth Warrick shook off their gay friends before the picnic started, slipped away and had a swell twosome picnic of their own. What the film fans will see will be a nifty little love scene—and one small hamper of fried chicken (non-rationed).

Yes, Hollywood is quite sincere about food conservation. When it first started, a certain director made a mild protest to his producer:

"Does this scene really have to be meatless?" he asked—and the producer detourned his answer via the following story:

It was almost 4 a. m. when John got home from a poker party. Shoes off, he was tiptoeing down the hall when a board creaked.

"Is that you, John?" his wife called.

Herbert's 'Woo-Woo To Go Into 'Kismet'

Hollywood.—Hugh Herbert and his famed "woo-woo" will grace Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Kismet" Technicolor spectacle, starring Ronald Colman. As Mollah, addlepated stooge for the crafty beggar Hajj, played by Colman, the bewildered Herbert has a tailor-made role.

Appearances Are Often Deceiving

Hollywood, Sept. 29 (INS).—There's been so much talk about how a boy of Jackie Cooper's age remains out of the service, it is only fair to tell you he's in it up to his neck. The facts are that for the last five months Jackie has been in the Navy, a student in the Navy accredited college program at Loyola University. Within a few weeks he will be assigned to the Navy's V-12 advance training, and just where he will be sent, even Jackie doesn't know.

ALICE FAYE

That's why it was necessary for him to obtain permission of the Navy to make his next assignment, "Where Are My Children?" for Monogram. Jackie gets the top spot in this drama of juvenile delinquency which has the same old title, but a brand-new story, entirely different from the old silent-day movie of the same name.

Chatter in Hollywood: So far as Van Johnson is concerned, the thief who stole his car last week is either a perfect mechanic or else just a charming, good-hearted gentleman. At the time Van's car was stolen everything was wrong with it. The valves needed grinding, the radio wouldn't work and it needed a polish. Yesterday the Beverly Hills police returned the car to Van, with the radio fixed, the valves ground, the spark plugs cleaned, and it was polished and shining like a new nickel.

Alice Faye will again retire from the screen until after the birth of her baby expected May 1. "I wanted another baby," she told me, "so little Alice will have a playmate. I have very definite ideas about taking care of myself and resting, so I have refused to make any more pictures until next year.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: looks like love between June Havoc and Jack Oakie; Sonja Henie sends word her new ice show will open in Indianapolis October 4; Mae West's picture "Tropicana" has been retitled "The Heat's On."

Al Shean of the famous Gallagher and Shean vaudeville team, is reviving the act with Jack Kenney, vaudeville headliner, as the new Mr. Gallagher; Alexis Smith, back on the set, a little wobbly but able to work.

Powerful Role Slated for Rooney

Hollywood.—The most powerful dramatic role he has ever enacted was recently handed to Mickey Rooney by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He will play the part of Mi in "National Velvet," English steeplechase story from the popular novel by Enid Bagnold, to be given outstanding production with Mervyn LeRoy directing and Pandro S. Berman as producer. It will be Mickey's next assignment following completion of "Andy Hardy's Blonde Trouble" in which he is currently working.

Mi, the leading role in the picture, is a young waif who early learned to shift for himself in a world where he got little but hard knocks, the seamy side of London. Cynical and worldly beyond his years, he drifts to the country and meets Velvet Brown, the role which 12-year old Elizabeth Taylor won recently.

Mickey will find in the role an opportunity to display the dramatic ability for serious roles which won him acclaim in "The Human Comedy."

Times Square Tattle

New York, Sept. 29.

On the morning of the American invasion of Salerno, Quentin Reynolds was on a warship with Lieut. Col. Vincent Sheean. The war correspondent asked Sheean about the Italian coast which was to be invaded within the hour. Sheean watched the sun come up over Italy, and said: "There's Salerno. And over there is Paestum, which has the finest ruins in Europe. From the Temple of Neptune or the Basilica of Cardine Massime in Paestum you can see the valley overlooking the funny little road which runs to the right. You can go to Naples from there by bus in 72 minutes. And from the left——" . . . "Sheean, are you kidding me?" Reynolds asked. "Do you really know so much about this place?" . . . "I ought to," said Sheean. "Diana and I spent our honeymoon here."

"Alfalfa lacked the one thing you need most, to work for Welles—a private income" . . . Father Hyland's story about the Church of the Good Thief at Dannemora Prison will be produced by Clarence Brown. The movie will be called "The Good Thief" . . . Secretary Morgenthau and Allan Lehman, the banker, are both trustees of the estate of Morgenthau's mother. It was decided that the estate's ready cash be converted into war bonds. Lehman received a phone call from Morgenthau last week. The Secretary of the Treasury wanted the banker's advice on which series of war bonds should be purchased . . . They took those bags directly to the Radio City branch of General Donovan's Office of Strategic Service—and arrived while the elevator operators' strike still was in progress . . . The officers therefore carried those heavy bags up the long flights of stairs. It was a long, weary trip. In fact, the climb from the ground floor to the OSS offices took almost as much time as did their flight from Newfoundland to New York.

Ludwig Bemelmans, the artist-writer, now is at MGM. The building superintendent complained to Arthur Freed, the producer, that Bemelmans was painting figures on the beautiful white office walls. "What'll I do?" he wailed. Freed instructed the superintendent: "Put a frame around them" . . . Robert Ardrey, the playwright and author of "Thunder Rock," and Howard Fast, who wrote the book "Citizen Tom Paine," have taken leaves of absence from the OWI. Playwright Ardrey is writing a book, and Book Writer Fast is writing a play. They confer with each other for mutual advice . . . Joe Barnes, head of the OWI's New York office, who just returned from California, is preparing for a longer absence.

Bishop Tucker Urges Postwar Church Unity

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 29.—Churches have the postwar responsibility of showing peoples of all nations that "only in unity of purpose will they be able to realize the possibilities open to them," the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker of Richmond, Va., presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, declared today.

The leader of 1,500,000 Episcopalians in the United States came here for conferences preceding the church's fifty-fourth triennial convention, opening next Saturday.

"You can't have freedom until you have people morally qualified," he said. "That is where the church comes in. It must enlarge the vision of the peoples of all nations and make them realize that only in unity of purpose will they be able to realize the possibilities that are open to them."

Expressing "high hopes for the future," he continued:

"Especially encouraging, I believe, is the reception given the Archbishop of York by the dignitaries of the Orthodox Church in Russia.

"I know the Russian people well, having served with the Red Cross there during and after World War I. Eager to improve their educational and hospital facilities, they will accept all the help we, the Christian Church, can give them, and I'm sure we won't let them down.

"With the new understanding between Communist authorities and the church, much should be accomplished. But we must take a realistic view of the problems of Russia, her aspirations and aims. Over here, far from the disturbing elements in central Europe, we are apt to be idealistic and fail to get to the heart of the trouble. We must reach a common understanding, and the time to start is now."

Senate Group Votes Against Duty Abroad for 3 Women Units

By the Associated Press

Three trimly clad WAVES yesterday heard the all-male Senate Naval Affairs Committee vote solidly against allowing them to serve overseas.

"Do you approve of the action the committee has jus taken?" Chairman Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts inquired of the girls who were sitting in the spectators' section.

"We were a little disappointed," one replied.

Walsh told the young women they had been doing excellent work, but there were very few billets suitable for the Navy's women reservists abroad, and that such posts could be filled with limited servicemen.

Through the committee's decision, the stay-home provision stands for Coast Guard SPARS and women Marines, as well as WAVES.

The Army's WACS, Walsh remarked, are in a different category, since there are more large Army installations abroad where they fit in.

The committee's vote amended a House-approved bill which raises the rank of the commanding officer of the WAVES from lieutenant commander to captain; entitled WAVES to the same benefits and allowances as Navy male personnel, and stipulates that female physicians and surgeons shall not be permitted to serve aboard ship but shall be restricted to shore duty in the continental United States.

'44 Women Voters To Increase 5%, Spangler Says

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Sept. 29 (AP).—Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, believes there will be a 5 per cent increase in the number of women voting next year.

"Women cast 45 per cent of the 1942 vote and indications are they will be on a 50-50 basis with men in votes cast in 1944," he said in an interview while visiting at his home here.

He listed four forthcoming Eastern elections as "important" in indicating 1944 trends and had this comment on Republican victory prospects:

Gubernatorial election in New Jersey—"Good."

Gubernatorial election in Kentucky—"A close fight."

Silk Pajamas for Girl Workers Barred by WLB Cleveland Rule

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 29.—Silk lounging pajamas are taboo as working garments at the Ohio Crankshaft Co.'s five plants here, the Regional War Labor Board ruled today. So are sweaters. But slacks are mandatory for the women.

The board's directive otherwise was concerned with such matters as voluntary membership maintenance and dues checkoff, sought by and granted the CIO Automobile Workers Union as representative of about 3700 employes.

Uniforms Prescribed

Taking cognizance of women's sartorial safety and masculine distraction, the WLB incorporated in its directive a settlement between the company and union on the moot question of women's uniforms. It specified, in words of WLB, announcement No. V-116:

"All uniforms must have short sleeves."

"No uniforms may have loose belts at the waist or flowing ties."

"Silk lounging pajamas may not be worn."

"All female employes must wear slacks."

"Sweaters may not be worn by female employes."

Asked about cotton or rayon lounging or sleeping pajamas, the WLB said there were not covered in its order, but that the intention was that all are banned.

Silk Pajamas Barred

Have women ever showed up for work in silk pajamas? Well, no, but the company wants to make sure they don't. An Ohio Crankshaft spokesman said the controversy over women's rights in dress started when the company prescribed a uniform for the girls. Workers purchased the uniforms from, and had them laundered by, the company.

The union complained about the women being compelled to buy the uniforms from the concern. To settle this, the WLB approved a plan whereby the women can buy their own work outfits as long as they conform to the five fashion rules.

Asthma Mucus Loosened First Day. For Thousands of Sufferers. Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is said under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory, to get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c. Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach. 2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.

A growing person who is operating on a 65 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies.

SSS-Tonic is especially designed to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient . . . and to promote those STOMACH JUICES which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair.

These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!

Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win

Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. ©S.S.S.Co.

Nats Twice Beat Tribe to Clinch Second Place

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We were just thinking that the coming World Series will start out as a novel experience for the Yankees despite their lush World Series background. It will be the first time in years that they aren't meeting up with a National League pennant winner that is suffering from an inferiority complex.

POVICH

The Cardinals last October pretty well dispatched the theory of Yankee invincibility, which used to send other National League clubs into the series cowed and tremulous. The Yankees had a habit of licking the N. L. pennant winners in four straight. They had turned that trick in four World Series. The Yanks hadn't lost a series in their last seven, until the Cardinals came along in 1942.

Not only did the Cardinals lick the Yankees last year, but they poured it on, mopping up in four straight games after the Yankees won the opener. The Cards served notice in the first game of the series that they were going to be tough, even though they lost the opener. Red Ruffing, you remember, was pitching a no-hit game until two were out in the eighth. That was one put-out longer than Herb Pennock went against the Pirates in his bid for a World Series no-hitter in 1927. But the Cardinals didn't scare easily.

Before the game was over they had Ruffing on the ropes with four runs in the ninth on five straight hits, and that demonstration of stuff was probably the turning point of the series. Anyway, the Cardinals went on to win, and quite easily, if you remember.

They beat the Yankees in the tight games, but when it came to the one slugfest, they beat the Yankees at that game, too. That was the fourth game of the series, the 9-6 battle. On the bases they ran the Yankees ragged, and on the defense they put a horrible fear into the Yanks.

One play in the second game of the series served notice on the Yanks that here was a team to contend with. That was the occasion when Bill Dickey put the tying run on base for the Yanks with a single in the ninth and Manager Joe McCarthy, in an attempt to make the most of it, installed Tuck Stainback as a pinch-runner for Dickey. Buddy Hassett followed with a single to right field, and things were rapidly looking up for the Yanks. But only for a moment, because as Stainback ended a long slide into third base he was dumbfounded.

There in the glove of Third Baseman Whitey Kurowski nestled bad news for the Yanks. It was the ball, and Stainback was out by 10 feet. Right Fielder Enos Slaughter had just made the greatest throw in World Series history. It was incredible that a pinch-runner of Stainback's speed couldn't go from first to third on Hassett's kind of a hit, but the evidence to the contrary was awaiting Stainback.

That play upset Yankee equilibrium for the rest of the series. They scarcely dared to try for two bases on any kind of a hit. They were cautious, even overcautious. The Cardinals, however, took chances, got breaks and ran the bases almost at will.

The Cardinals licked the Yanks at every turn. Even when Manager Joe McCarthy tried to go strategic, they took a beating. There was the play in the third game, for instance, which Spud Chandler lost, 2-0, despite the fact that only four Cardinals reached base against him in the eight innings he pitched. Marty Marion laid down a bunt that was intended to be a sacrifice in that game, and McCarthy squawked so loudly that it was foul that the umpires ruled Martin should bat over. He did, and beat out an infield hit that figured in the winning run.

Besides carrying over the memory that they can't run the bases against the Cardinals with anything except extreme caution, the Yankees have learned, too, that they can't even take a good lead off the bases. Joe Gordon tried that in the ninth inning of the final game, and was he surprised? Walker Cooper picked him off second, and the World Series was over.

The best thing the Yankees will carry into next week's World Series is their pitching. All of a sudden Joe McCarthy's pitching has been even more wonderful than usual. Spud Chandler just won his twentieth game, Ernie Bonham bounced out of his slump with an impressive four-hitter the other day, and Hank Borowy has won 11 of his last 12 starts. Just to make the picture brighter, Marius Russo seems to have recovered from his sore arm, or so his recent shut-out would indicate.

The great imponderable of the series that is coming up would seem to be Charley Keller, the closest thing to a power guy in the Yankee line-up. Keller has been having a poor season with a batting average of less than .270. But the Cardinals know that he is to be treated with great caution. He made only four hits in last year's series. Two of them were home runs.

Bivins, Jeffra On Boxing Cards Here

'Duration Champ' To Meet Dorazio; Ex-Feather Ruler To Face Cockfield

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Promoters Goldie Ahearn and Joe Turner yesterday came up with two choice fistic morsels as Ahearn announced the closing out of the Jimmy Bivins-Gus Dorazio bout for Wednesday, October 13, at Uline Arena and Turner completed arrangements for a Harry Jeffra-Johnny Cockfield fight next Monday at Turner's Arena. Both bouts are for 10 rounds.

Dorazio qualified for the big shot recently by defeating Al Hart, Army War College Negro, in an exceedingly fast and close fight. Bivins, who recently knocked out Herbert Marshall at Griffith Stadium, further enhanced his claim of "duration champ" by more recently defeating Melio Bettina, Beacon, N. Y., southpaw, in Cleveland.

Other Cities Outbid

Ahearn, who outbid New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland promoters for the match, confidently declared he expected Uline Arena, which will be enlarged to seat close to 10,000, to be sold out at ring time.

Both fighters are expected to arrive here for training by the middle of next week and will work out for at least five days previous to the bout at Ahearn's gym, 419 9th st. nw.

Jeffra, a Baltimorean, former world featherweight champion who is on the comeback trail, recently slashed his way to an 8-round triumph over Billy Banks, local Negro flash and Tuesday night decisively outpointed Davey Crawford, New York featherweight at Queensboro.

He Beat Rosa Here

Cockfield, who migrated here from New York, is a hard-punching little Negro who scored a three-round technical kayo over Jose Domingo Roza here on the Mamakos-Garner card after he had been knocked out in nine rounds by Danny Petro in a sensational scrap in which both boys were near kayoes on several occasions.

Jeffra, who is being handled by the Veteran Heinie Blaustein, is expected to check in Friday and will work out daily at Turner's Arena. Cockfield, already here, will start Turner Arena drills either today or tomorrow.

Terps Bolstered By Arrival of Frosh Gridmen

The varsity football squad at the University of Maryland was bolstered yesterday by four new players entering school with the incoming freshman class.

Two of the new men are all-high school tackles, Dave Marowitz of Philadelphia and Walter Klodne, a transfer from Catholic University, who took scholastic honors in Washington.

Sid Sterman from Washington is expected to make a bid for a guard berth, while Harry Triplett, a halfback from Upperville, Va., is due to work out in a backfield spot.

Dr. O. U. Singer Heads D. C. AAU

Dr. Orville U. Singer, who has been filling the unexpired term of president of the District Amateur Athletic Union since the death of A. Earle Weeks, was elected president of the District AAU at the organization's annual meeting last night. William E. Russell was elected honorary president.

Other officers elected were E. Joseph Aranoff, first vice president and treasurer; Edward Rosenbloom, second vice president; Dorsey Griffith, third vice president, and Winfred Johnson, secretary. Joseph Aranoff was elected chairman of the registration committee, with the following members: Joseph Bertolini, Ralph W. Foster, W. C. Robbins and Charles M. Fyfe.

Also meeting last night was the Downtown Coaches Association, which elected J. Kip Edwards president, Joseph Aranoff first vice president and treasurer, and W. C. Robbins second vice president and secretary.

Leo Durocher Given Release by Brooklyn

Return Next Year as Bench Manager Hinted; 'Want Him to Feel Free to Go'—Rickey

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 29.—Leo Durocher will be given his unconditional release from his player-manager contract with the Brooklyn Dodgers, effective with the close of the season Sunday, but may negotiate for a return as bench manager, President Branch Rickey announced today.

Talking to a press conference after today's game with the Pirates, Rickey said Durocher would be "free to negotiate for the Dodger managership, or some other job in baseball, or in radio or Hollywood."

DUROCHER

"I prefer to have a manager without a contract," Rickey explained. "I do not want a man who feels that he is managing the Dodgers because he is tied down by a contract that keeps him from going somewhere else. My manager must be a man who wants to manage the Dodgers more than he wants to do anything else.

"I have not thought of hiring anyone other than Durocher, but by giving him his release we will both be free to talk about next year without having strings attached. If he wants to make a connection elsewhere he will be free to do so."

Rickey said he had in mind that whoever piloted the club next year would be a bench manager.

Leo the Lip came to the Dodgers as a shortstop from the St. Louis Cardinals at the close of the 1937 season and was appointed manager a year later by Larry MacPhail.

He did not play in any games last year and this season appeared in just six, batting .222.

Six From Yankees, Three From Cards Selected; Cronin, Frisch Managers

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 29.—The big leagues today picked a pair of 18-player squads for the postseason exhibition trip to our troops in the Pacific, including practically every top performer in the business for 1943.

Managed by Frankie Frisch, the Pittsburgh Pirates' pepper pilot, and Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox, the all-star collections include nine of the big guns from next week's World Series; 18 of the aces from last summer's all-star game; the year's batting bosses in both loops—Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals and Luke Appling of the Chicago White Sox; the American League's No. 1 elbower, Spud Chandler of the Yankees, and the season's home-run king, Rudy York of Detroit's Tigers. The two outfits will leave for the Pacific theater as soon after the World Series as the War Department gives them the green light.

Six Yankees Named

Headed by six of the American League champion Yankees and three of the National League pennant-winning Cardinals, the squads list virtually all the season's "all-star all stars" with the possible single exception of Mort Cooper, the stylist slinger of the Cards' staff. And Brother Walker, the National League's No. 1 catcher, will be along to hold up the Cooper family interests.

Four members of the Nats were chosen, including outfielder George Case, American League base stealing champ, Outfielder Stan Spence, Pitcher Dutch Leonard and Catcher Jake Early.

Along with Musial and Walker Cooper, the Cards also are sending Lou Klein, the classy rookie second-sacker. Against this trio, the Yanks will be represented by Chandler, Second Baseman Joe Gordon; Third Sacker Bill Johnson, one of the junior circuit's "rookies of the year;" King Kong Charlie Keller and his big bat, and Bill Dickey and Rollie Hemsley from the catching department.

All eight of the National League clubs are represented. The American League picked its squad from six of its outfits.

Summers, Goetz Umpires

In addition to the players and managers, the squads will include Umpires Larry (National League) Goetz and Bill (American League) Summers; Trainers Charlie Jorgensen of the Pirates and Ralph McCarthy of the Red Sox and Leo Ward, the Cards' secretary, and Earl Hilligan, American League's Service Bureau director, as team secretaries.

In Commissioner K. M. Landis announced that Leslie O'Connor, secretary-treasurer of Baseball, also will make the trip and will be in charge of the teams "so far as baseball is concerned."

Landis said O'Connor "will have

Wynn Scores 18th Victory In Nightcap

Niggeling Quells Indians in 1st, 6 to 2; Candini Rescues Early in Second, 7-4

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Timely, and at times terrific, hitting and a pair of sufficient pitching performances gave the Nats a double victory over the Cleveland Indians last night and outright possession of second place in the league standings, their best showing since the pennant winning club of 1933.

After Johnny Niggeling pitched himself out of a pair of trouble spots to win the opener, 6-2, Stanley Spence slugged out a home run, triple and double in that order to help Early Wynn to his eighteenth victory in the nightcap, 7-4, before 8000 fans. Wynn was hit by a batted ball in the fifth and left the game in favor of Milo Candini, but received credit for the victory.

The Nats earned approximate shares of $1200 each for their second place finish and pushed the Indians within a half game of fourth place. The finish marked the first time since 1930 the Nats finished second and only the second time since 1913. For Manager Ossie Bluege the runner-up spot was particularly sweet as he had been consigned to seventh place by the preseason experts.

This is how it looks:

	W.	L.	GB.	GP.
Washington	84	67	....	3
Cleveland	79	71	4½	4
Chicago	79	72	5	3

Niggeling gave up nine hits in the first game, but struck out seven and when the Indians got tough he got tougher. Timely hitting by Jake Powell, Johnny Sullivan and Sherry Robertson was too much for four Cleveland hurlers with the loss to Starter Vernon Kennedy.

The Nats scored three cheap runs off Jim Bagby in the nightcap before Spence took charge. He powered a tremendous drive over the right-field wall, smashed a triple to center and dropped a double to right with men on base each time.

Wynn Is Bombarded

Wynn was hit hard in the 4⅔ innings he worked in the nightcap and left the game after Hank Edwards hit him in the chin with a line drive. Wynn threw out Edwards, but retired and Candini staggered through as both the Nats and Indians accounted for 13 hits.

The Nats had the best of the free-hitting nightcap from the time the Cleveland defense let Bagby down with a horrible job of non-support in the second inning and the Nats came up with three runs. The inning bears repetition as rightfully not a single Washington player earned his base. With one out Robertson was credited with a single when his pop fly fell behind Bagby and out of Boudreau's hands. Priddy hit a hot liner which Keltner blocked but couldn't pick up and he earned a base hit. Sullivan then hit a bounder which Keltner let go by for a cheap hit and Hockett erred on the throw-in, a run scoring. Wynn then bounced a single past Boudreau who should have had the ball but was stuck in his tracks and two more runs scored.

Spence's terrific home run, with Moore on base after Keltner made an error on his simple grounder,

Yanks Will Rely on 'Pistol-Packin' Mama'

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 29.—The New York Yankees have adopted a ditty called "Pistol Packin' Momma" for a theme song and every time they chime in on a chorus of "lay that pistol down" people for blocks around want to pick up the gun and start firing.

But besides rendering some very bad music the Yankees are stirring up a bad omen for the St. Louis Cardinals in next week's World Series.

Two years ago the Yankees made a marching song out of the "Beer Barrel Polka" and for weeks before the World Series they would sound off with "roll out the barrel" without the slightest provocation. In the series they rolled the Dodgers over one.

Last year the song writers neglected to provide the musical-minded Yankees with a lyrical lift and while this oversight was not blamed at the time for their subsequent loss of the world championship to the Cardinals, the New York American League Glee Club is running no similar risk this fall.

They are singing more and louder than ever before.

Tuesday night Manager Joe McCarthy gave a pennant party for his players in the big banquet room of the Ruppert brewery and the Yankee songbirds probably would still be clustered around the piano if the brewery management hadn't finally turned out the lights and shooed them home.

In addition to the singing, Joe Gordon, poet laureate of the Yanks, memorialized the occasion with some verse which went from bad to worse and McCarthy presented all the players with glass banks which looked like baseballs. It may have been a hint to tell them what to do with their World Series money.

The player who obviously had the most fun, incidentally, was Nick Etten. Life with the Phillies was never like this.

Mister, here's a shoe designed to give your feet the time of their life! This pre-flexed, saddle-stitched Moccasin style, "needs no breaking in"—a pleasure from the very first step! Flagg's Longhorn Leather is your assurance of endurance!

Navy to Have Four Backfields Ready for Cornell Game

Tars Engage In Heavy Workouts

Scherr, Ex-Terp, To Face Middies In Saturday Night Tilt in Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Sept. 29.—The presence of four superb backfield players is not something to make any football coach exactly moan, but Navy's grid mentors are, to say the least, noncommittal about the whole affair.

But the way in which the Tars are shaping up in their heavy scrimmages and practices, there will be at least four complete backfield units available when Coach John E. (Billick) Whelchel decides to pour on the power.

The three reliables from the 1942 varsity are Hal Hamberg, the diminutive pill tossers; Hillis Hume, a great broken field runner and general player par excellence, and Bill Crawley, who paved the way for one of Navy's touchdowns Saturday.

Smith Newest Sparkplug

The newest sparkplug for the Middie backfield is one Bruce Smith, a plebe who went places as a quarterback last weekend.

As he went through his paces during scrimmages this week, Navy's backfield coach, Frank Molesworth, eyed him as another potential triple-threater, for he's a master at kicking, passing and running.

So that gives Billick at least four top-ranking backs who know what to do with the ball, and when.

The Tar coaches, not inclined to regard the 31-0 defeat of North Carolina Pre-Flight last Saturday as a fair test for the Middies, were not overlooking anything today in pushing the Sailors through hard blocking and tackling practice in preparation for the game with Cornell in Baltimore Saturday night.

Meanwhile, night practice was planned for the Tars tomorrow and Friday.

Cornell boasts such experienced players as Cushing, a center who was a star man against Navy in 1941; Calcagni, an outstanding tackle who played for Penn State last year and was captain-elect of that team before he moved to Cornell's Navy unit; Maceyko, a former Syracuse tailback, Blose, a 185-pound 6-foot fullback who kicked for Cornell last year; Accorsi, a fullback who played for Penn last year, doing all the spinner plays for that team.

Scherr With Cornell

Also playing for Cornell will be Nathan Scherr, a Baltimore boy who played at the University of Maryland in 1942. Since Accorsi is suffering from a wrenched knee, Scherr may play in his place.

Another Big Red for Navy to watch is 205-pound Jim Carrington, who did a swell job as a blocking back against Bucknell last week.

A 6-foot-3-inch giant, Carrington is a former Fordham star.

The Big Red team defeated Bucknell, 7 to 6, in its opening game, and turned back the Sampson Naval Base team, 27 to 13, Saturday.

The Midshipmen's regiment will go by boat to Baltimore for the game, which starts at 7 p. m., Saturday, and pregame ticket sales indicated an attendance exceeding 35,000 persons.

Navy's starring line-up against Cornell will be the same as that which faced Pre-Flight last week.

Center Mel Hein to Rejoin Grid Giants

Retirement Fall Before 'Itch' to Get in Uniform

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 29.—Mel Hein, the one-time Washington State College star and for the past dozen years the greatest center in the history of the National Professional Football League, today notified the New York Giants he is coming back for his thirteenth season in the league.

He announced his retirement at the end of last season to become coach at Union College in up-State New York, but Union dropped football for the duration and Hein confessed to the Giant front office that he again felt the "itch" to try on his No. 7 jersey for just one more crack at the game.

Announcing his return, the Giants said their great pivot man will remain with Union, but will see action in the Giants' opener against the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia Steagles October 9.

Hein's 12-year record with the Giants comes close to being the league "tops" in any position. Starting in his second year, he was named as the All-League center for eight campaigns. The Giants say he never made a bad pass from center in his 12 seasons. Defensively, he was the quarterbacking brains of the club, and in 12 years the Giants had to take time out for him just twice.

Brazle Beats Braves for Cards, 3 to 2

Rookie Southpaw Gives Up 9 Hits In Last Mound Job Before Series

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 29.—Alpha Brazle, making his last start before an expected World Series assignment, won his eighth victory of the season today as the Cardinals defeated Boston, 3 to 2, but he came up from under a hard pounding to do it.

The dogged Braves got at Brazle for nine hits and waited out six walks. Fine defensive play by the Cardinal infield and a flurry of base hits for two runs in the sixth inning saved the day for the southpaw rookie.

Three Hits in First

Boston nicked him for three hits in the first inning, but Ed Joost was picked off on an attempted steal and the side retired scoreless.

Walker Cooper kept to his torrid slugging pace by doubling home Lou Klein in the first inning for a lead that held good until the fourth.

Then Boston scored two runs, one a gift by Brazle as he walked Bill Heltzel with the bases loaded. However, the Redbirds regained the lead for the duration by counting two runs on four hits in the sixth.

Yanks, Chisox Trade Whitewash Scores

Dietrich Shuts Out New Yorks, 3 to 0, But Champs Come Back for Nightcap, 4 to 0

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 29.—The New York Yankees were shutout 3 to 0 by the Chicago White Sox in the first game of a doubleheader today, but they snapped right back to administer a whitewashing themselves in the second game, 4 to 0.

The loss in the first game scarcely could be charged to the pennant party the Yankees held last night. They simply were unable to do anything with the pitching of bespectacled Bill Dietrich, who kept seven hits scattered while Joe Kuhel spoiled an almost equally good mound performance by Lefty Marius Russo.

For six innings Russo matched Dietrich's shutout hurling, allowing only two hits, but in the seventh Luke Appling singled, Ralph Hodgin doubled and Kuhel singled both home. Kuhel also singled to score Appling in the ninth against Johnny Murphy after Russo had been removed for a pinch batter.

The Yanks proved they were wide awake in the second game however, by getting 11 hits of which one was Joe Gordon's sixteenth home run, three were triples and another a double.

They also made four double plays to back up the seven-hit pitching of rookie Charley Wensloff, who broke a three-game losing streak.

Giants' Gordon Inducted Into Coast Guard

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Sid Gordon, who has played both the infield and outfield for the New York Giants this season, informed Manager Mel Ott by telegram today that he had been inducted into the Coast Guard.

The Giants also gave up the services today of three other players—Catcher Ray Berres, who is to report to his Kenosha, Wis., draft board tomorrow; Catcher Ernie Lombardi, who has an injured hand and has been given permission to return to his home in California; and Infielder Dick Bartell, who recently fractured his right wrist and is going to his home in California.

Nats Defeat Indians Twice, Clinch Second

upped the Nats' lead to 5 to 0 in the fourth.

Roy Cullenbine put the Indians back in the ball game in the fifth when his long curving drive over the right-field wall stayed inside the white marker for a home run and Hockett and Bagby, who had singled, scored ahead of him.

Spence lost little time in getting the two runs back, as after Moore doubled to right Stanley lined a smoking triple to the center-field score board, which was enough for Bagby. Jake Early's single off Ray Poat scored Spence and concluded the Nats' scoring for the evening, with Relief Hurlers Naymick and Gromek succeeding Poat.

Candini was continually on the verge of trouble, but he managed to get by with only one run scored against him, and that was unearned. Cullenbine singled, went to second on Moore's error and scored on Edwards' single in the seventh. Bluege had Mickey Hefner, originally his starting pitcher for tonight's game, Jim Mertz and Wilford LeFebvre in the bullpen in a continuous warming up session, but they were not needed.

Niggeling ran his stream of scoreless innings to 24 in the first game before the Indians scored in the seventh, but the veteran knuckle ball hurler was plenty content to get out of that inning with only one tally against him.

A single by Buddy Rosar and consecutive walks to Manager Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack was the sign for action in the Nats' bullpen, but Niggeling settled down nicely at this point. Pinch hitter Roy Cullenbine fetched a run home with a fly to center, but the runners held their bases on Hockett's short pop to left and after Niggeling walked Rocco to reload the bases Ken Keltner sent a short fly to right.

Niggeling was the victim of an unearned run in the ninth, which left him with a record of six runs against him in six starts in a Washington uniform, five of them earned. After two strikeouts, Rocco singled, and on Keltner's grounder, Robertson threw the ball into the right-field pavilion. Edwards followed with his third hit to score a run, but that was all for the Tribe.

The Nats broke a scoreless tie in the fifth when Niggeling smacked a long, high double to right and Jake Powell followed with a slashing double just inside third base. The Nats upped their lead to 3-0 in the sixth on a lone hit, Vernon Kennedy walked Moore, Robertson, Early and himself out of the ball game with one out. Priddy forced Moore but Johnny Sullivan smacked a single over Mack's head off Joe Heving and the Nats had enough runs to win.

Powell's third hit of the game was followed by a double by Mickey Vernon off the right field wall to give the Nats a run in the seventh and in the eighth Robertson and Early singled and Priddy, who had been having a horrible time of it with men on base, came through with a well-hit double to score more runs. Ex-Nat Jack Salveson was the victim with Steve Gromek, up from Baltimore, halting the hitting.

La Chappelle Has Thicker Skull—Wins

Maurice La Chappelle has a thick skull, and it was by the breadth of said cranium that he won the feature wrestling match from John Bonica, the grappling medico, at Turner's Arena last night. After an even half-hour of business the gentlemen squared off and came together head-on with a titanic crash. Both men were stunned, but the Frenchman recovered sufficiently to stagger up and pin Bonica.

Before the end came, a disappointing crowd was treated to one of the cleverest exhibitions ever staged at Turner's. Both men thoroughly knew their jobs and were evenly matched. However, the class was as wasted as though Joe Turner had presented Leopold Stokowski and his mob. Most of the customers wouldn't recognize a legitimate hold if it stared them in the face.

Babe Sharkey made short work of chunky Tom George in the semi-final, retiring him with a body press after 13 rough (on George) minutes.

Cowboy Luttrall whipped Abe Stein with body slams and a press after a villainous 15 minutes. And he would have whipped one of the female guests who called him a naughty name and swatted him, but the police interfered and led him safely back to his cell.

Luttrall choked, slugged and stomped Stein all about the premises. He kicked him out of the ring and for several minutes refused to let the New Yorker back into the enclosure.

Johnny (Tripod) Long and John Melas battled to a clean and scientific draw in a rough match.

Dick Craddock of Washington and Baltimore's Jim Stefano worked to a lusty stalemate in the opening match. OSCAR ELDER.

Inflationary Gap Now Put At 51 Billion

A differential of more than 51 billion dollars, representing the excess of national income over consumer goods and services available, continues as the greatest danger in the fight against inflation, the Office of War Information reported yesterday.

The agency, in its monthly survey of factors influencing living costs, said, however, that this threat to the control of costs was counterbalanced by some mitigating circumstances. Among those cited were tax payments at the highest rate in history; reduction of consumer credit outstanding from seven billion dollars to $4,800,000,000 over a year; increased investment in life insurance with premiums collected in June amounting to $297,600,000 as compared with $277,500,000 in 1942; mounting savings accounts and the Third War Loan.

As a result of public cooperation in these measures, OWI stated, living costs—arrested during May-June for the first time since the start of the war—have continued to decline. The survey showed the reduction was .2 per cent during May-June; .8 per cent during June-July, and .5 per cent during the July-August period.

As factors working against stabilization, the OWI listed war expenditures of 88 billion dollars for the current fiscal year and 100 billion dollars next year, compared with 52.4 billion dollars in 1941-42; money in circulation (as of September 1), 18.6 billion dollars compared with 13.2 billion dollars the same time last year; money in checking accounts (September 1), 35.7 billion dollars against 27.2 billion dollars, and corporate profits after taxes (second quarter), 2.1 billion dollars compared with 1.8 billion dollars.

Stocks Edge Unevenly Higher With Trading on Light Scale

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 29.—The stock market tried to do a little better in the price field today but was handicapped by a lack of interest which held down volume.

What buying there was mainly was inspired by a paucity of offerings. The new military achievements in Italy and the good reports from Russia were encouraging to Wall Street sentiment but were negative as a trading stimulus.

Prices hardened a bit after a morning of uneven and narrow price shifts. Near the close enough bids appeared to lift a few leaders a point or so, but generally the gains were small. Some specialties scored wide advances.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite rose .1 of a point to 50.8. Of the 765 issues traded 289 improved, 247 were down and 229 unchanged. Stock Exchange transactions of 466,480 shares were the smallest in two weeks. Yesterday's were 607,020.

U. S. Steel and Goodrich were among the late sprinters, each gaining a point or so. DuPont was up 1⅛ and Certain-teed Products preferred, a comparatively inactive stock, jumped more than 5 on a considerable turnover and closed with a net gain of 4¾.

Moderately ahead were Republic Steel, Chrysler, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Harvester, Air Reduction, American Telephone, Western Union and Standard Oil (N. J.). Several of the top ranking rails moved up fractions. Some coppers, chemicals and farm equipments were among the losers.

Carrier loans attracted support in the bond market. A few commodities extended yesterday's sharp gains. Chicago wheat climbed 1 to 1⅜ cents a bushel. Hogs advanced 10 to 20 cents. Cotton futures retreated 25 to 50 cents a bale.

Canceled Orders Of Westinghouse Total 141 Million

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Business in reverse, or $141,000,000 in orders canceled in eight months, was reported today by Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. which reached new war production and employment highs in August.

Chairman A. W. Robertson said August shipments had a gross value of more than 67 million dollars, up 2 million dollars from July, while employment was 106,220, up 1200.

Robertson said the cancelations were caused by changes in Government production requirements.

"These cancelations involve changes in our production plans, working forces and inventories and tie up large amounts of working capital while settlement of the canceled contracts in being negotiated," he said.

"Nevertheless the Westinghouse backlog of unfilled orders exceeds 900 million dollars, due to the fact that new orders are still coming in faster than we can ship finished products," Robertson said. "Orders received in August alone amounted to some 89 million dollars."

ICC Rejects Plan Of Nickel Plate

Application of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company for authority to acquire 60,000 shares of common capital stock of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway Company was denied yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The commission said the only objection to granting the application was made or behalf of holders of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis (Nickel Plate) preferred stock.

"The applicant is greatly in arrears in dividends on its cumulative preferred stock," ICC said.

"We are of the opinion that no need for the proposed purchase of stock has been shown and, therefore, that the diversion to that purpose of carrier funds necessary to pay the agreed purchase price ($3,170,000) is not consistent with the public interest."

McKesson Plans New Stock Issue

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Stockholders of McKesson & Robbins at their annual meeting in Baltimore on October 26 will vote on a proposal to create a new issue of 200,000 shares of preferred stock.

W. J. Murray, jr., president, said common stockholders were requested to authorize the new issue in order to simplify and strengthen the capital structure of the company.

He said the proposal was to sell only 150,000 shares of such an issue now and to use the proceeds—plus company funds—to redeem all 3½ per cent debentures and 5¼ per cent cumulative preferred stock how outstanding. Involved in redemption of those securities is $19,203,153 at their respective call prices.

Wheat Trade Halting In Canada Protested

Winnipeg, Sept. 29 (AP).—The Winnipeg Grain Exchange Council believes the Government's action in suspending wheat trading on the Exchange has eliminated the only facilities for publicly recording the true value of Canadian wheat in the world market.

Canadian producers, a statement by the council said, must rely on information from foreign sources to arrive at the value of Canadian wheat in the world market. "It is our sincere belief that the interests of the producers would have been better served by continuation of the open market system," it said.

May Help Chicago Pit

Chicago, Sept. 29 (AP).—Suspension of trading in wheat futures at Winnipeg was regarded here today as a possible factor in future broadening of market activities in the nation's wheat pits, since they now are the only ones in the world that are open to free speculative trading.

U. S. Sells First Block Of Axis-Owned Stocks

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—The first sale of Axis-owned securities under the Federal Government's plan to Americanize such properties was made today when a one-third interest in the G. Bruning Tobacco Extract Co., Inc., of Lynchburg, Va., was sold for $61,500 to Bernard R. Armour of Englewood, N. J.

Frank J. Garvey, manager of the Alien Property Custodian's New York office, said the interest, consisting of 82 shares of stock, was seized from the estate of Mrs. G. Schilling of Bremen, Germany.

Steel Mills End Record Month

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 29.—"Steel mills are completing a sensational month, with average weekly production of ingots perhaps the highest on record," Iron Age said today in disclosing that new steel orders exceeded shipments and that backlogs were reaching unprecedented heights.

"In some cases mills are booking up on sheets until next June," the trade publication said. "New military projects . . . must somehow be wedged into producers' books.

"The industry's current all-out drive for more production is all the more impressive in the light of manpower shortages and flash strikes. Like other industries, Steel's main problem now is the necessity for straightening out promptly the manpower muddle.

"While Congress discussed the drafting of fathers, draft boards in certain areas were calling them on a large scale. Meanwhile, labor was being hoarded in some war factories and a few workers were studying the calendar to determine the date when they will begin to lay off to avoid paying Federal income taxes. . . ."

You never heard of him...

but he may be protecting your boy!

The Sodium-Cooled Valve that he is inspecting will go into an airplane engine.

And the life of your boy and other boys may depend upon the unfailing performance of that engine.

Many other critical parts—for all kinds of motorized equipment—are subjected to this same "hard-boiled" scrutiny—this same "be-sure-it's-right" inspection.

Many an Eaton man and woman—working quietly behind the scenes—contributes importantly to the safe return of a combat plane—the dependability of a truck convoy—the smooth operation of a big gun.

And Eaton men and women are well aware of their responsibility. They know that fine quality, careful workmanship and uninterrupted production are vitally necessary to the safety of American fighting men—and the winning of the war.

For over thirty years it has been an Eaton privilege to furnish fine precision parts to America's great aircraft and automotive industries.

Today those industries are the backbone of the Arsenal of Democracy. And it is an even greater privilege for Eaton to serve them now.

When the war is over—and better planes, better cars, better trucks, better products of all kinds, are available—Eaton will offer an even wider skill and experience in making fine precision parts of many different kinds.

Eaton looks forward to that day.

Wheat Futures Continue Rise

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Wheat today continued on its upward move, which got underway with suspension of trading in the bread cereal at Winnipeg, advancing a cent or more to new highs since early July. Trading was less active than yesterday, but still far above the dull markets of recent weeks.

Rye spurted to gains of more than a cent, reflecting a strong Winnipeg market in the grain, but oats were under considerable profit-taking. The country offered oats more freely and bookings of corn expanded to 123,500 bushels, the largest in many weeks.

At the close, wheat was 1 to 1¾ higher, December, 1.51⅜@1.51½; May, 1.51⅞@1.52. Oats were ⅜ lower to ¼ higher, December, 77¾@77⅝, and rye was ⅜@1⅝ higher, December, 1.09⅞@1.10.

Flour trade has broadened considerably since the Winnipeg wheat trade suspension. Reports from New York said a large Eastern chain baker had purchased an estimated 150,000 sacks of flour, delivery to be made within the next 120 days. Smaller bakers took an estimated 25,000 sacks.

The comparative weakness of oats was attributed to the fact that the grain was selling above parity, while wheat and rye were not.

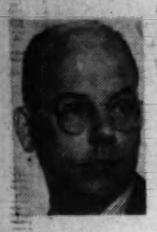
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Sayre Goes to New Job With Stettinius

Edward Stettinius is taking Francis Sayre with him to the State Department, where he'll be Undersecretary. His No. 1 lend-lease adviser, John Pratt, also is expected to remain with him. Crowley has agreed that OEW and the Lehman office will remain at status quo for the time being, but meantime he has asked Donald Stone of the Budget Bureau to report to him on how the overlapping and duplicating activities of the several overseas offices can be wiped out.



KLUTTZ

Walter Graham, training director at General Accounting, will resign to take a job in Puerto Rico. . . . Leonard W. A'Hearn, War Manpower's able budget office, has resigned to become Leo Crowley's administrative assistant at OEW. . . . The Bailey-Clark bill, which many believe will get Senate approval, will force out of Government service men who have been deferred because of family hardships unless it's amended . . . Internal Revenue is hard up for personnel so Treasury has lifted its restrictions against the employment of 3-A's. The ban against the hiring of 1-A's, however, still stands . . . WHAT'S IN A NAME: Herbert J. Bird has been appointed head of OPA's poultry section.

Charles F. Linhardt, Jr., is a small businessman from Baltimore who has been trying to blast contracts for small concerns out of the Maritime Commission. He's head of the commission's sm all business division and he's its liaison with the Smaller War Plants Corp. Linhardt is a vigorous guy and he speaks in plain language. He doesn't like the SWPC and he has told them so. Several weeks ago two War Production Board big shots were discussing the SWPC with Linhardt and he was his usual outspoken self.

Finally, one of the men asked Linhardt if he'd like to become chairman of SWPC to replace Brig. Gen. Robert Johnson, who, at that time, hadn't resigned. "Sure," said Linhardt, who thought his visitors were kidding, "but on three conditions: First, that I be made a general; second, that I be given a guarantee that I can keep the job for at least 30 days, and finally, that I be supplied with a first-class, large-size stable broom." The WPB bigwigs laughed half-heartedly and left. Sometime later, after General Johnson had quit, a friend told Linhardt that he actually had been offered the job.

Deferred U. S. Workers

Selective Service has come up with some interesting facts about deferred Federal workers. In War, Navy, Civil Aeronautics Authority, Panama Canal, War Shipping and Maritime Commission are 96,000 of the 112,399 in Government that are deferred. Only 15,741 are deferred in all the other Federal agencies and Lieut. Col. Francis Keesling, legislative officer of Selective Service, told Senator Lister Hill that no more than 7,500 of the 15,741 could meet and pass physical requirements if they were called today. And all the loose talk about the draft-dodgers in bomb-proof jobs here doesn't hold water, either. They are some, to be sure, but not the great nordes as we are told. The Army, for example, has thousands deferred in the field, but here in Washington are only 363 out of more than 9,000 males, a low percentage.

Meantime, the Government is preparing to issue new rules on the drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers in the Federal service. It's now taken for granted that the regulations will delay the drafting of most fathers in Government. An attempt will be made to place Government fathers on an equal footing with fathers in other essential industries. But just how it's to be done is the question. One group in Selective Service favors the outright deferment of all fathers in essential jobs and only fathers in nondeferable jobs would be called in the immediate future. It's proposed that an order be issued from Selective Service requiring the deferment of the big bulk of Government fathers. Another group proposes that Government fathers be left in 3-A, except those in nondeferable jobs. However, many fathers already have been classified 1-A.

A new classification may be set up for fathers in essential jobs and Government fathers would be included in this as Government—city, county, State and Federal—is an essential industry. However, the Selective Service would issue a list of jobs in essential industries which would be nondeferable. The whole question is expected to be resolved by the weekend, but it's now believed to be certain that the drafting of most Government fathers will be delayed.

Tuberculosis Control Seen By Official

Coulter Calls For Stringent Enforcement of Health Laws

Tuberculosis, ranked fourth in the list of death causes in Washington, can be brought under control by stringent enforcement of health laws, providing for the isolation of all cases and obligatory examination of all contacts, Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Health Department's Bureau of Tuberculosis, said yesterday.

Interviewed during the preparation of the TB exhibit at the Medical Society's show in the Mayflower Hotel, Dr. Coulter emphasized that the disease cannot be controlled "by halfway measures."

X-Ray Drive Indorsed

He indorsed the present drive of the U. S. Public Health Service of mass X-raying Government employes, but said that voluntary submission is not enough. Pointing to the probability that the highest degree of tuberculosis would be found in the group that refuses to be X-rayed, Dr. Coulter asked again, as he has on previous occasions, that all civil service employes be X-rayed when coming here.

He also urged a general preemployment X-ray examination be required of all employment agencies, especially for domestic employes who may have the care of children.

Dr. Coulter stressed the necessity of education of "physicians and the public alike" to draw their attention to the dangers of the disease and the comparative ease of combating it "once it is faced."

Death Rate Here Down

He pointed out that the city's TB death rate of 72.8 per 100,000 is the lowest in its history without minimizing the toughness of the problem here. As measures to improve the situation, he advocated the establishment of additional TB health centers "to bring the machinery to the people." He said that the present staff of physicians at the center on C st. is adequate and that the major labor problem there consists of finding secretarial help.

The bureau has no statistician, he said, and last week was left without a single stenographer.

The exhibit in the medical show at the Mayflower, besides displaying the various aspects of the Bureau's work, features a piece of original research in comparative studies of X-ray films and costs made by Dr. Willis C. Beasley, who has developed a new inexpensive roll film technique for mass X-raying while working in cooperation with the chest clinic.

Medical Show To Display New Methods

Opening of the fifteenth annual Scientific Assembly today at the Mayflower Hotel marks one of the most ambitious medical demonstrations in the country this year.

Scientific exhibits and displays will illustrate the most advanced techniques in medicine and medical research developed on both home and fighting fronts. Principal among these will be exhibits by the Naval Medical Research Institute, United States Naval Hospital and Medical School, the Army Medical Museum, the United States Public Health Service and exhibits by medical and health organizations in the District of Columbia.

Presentation by the Medical and Surgical Committee equipment for a battle dressing station on the cruiser, U. S. S. Boston, will be made at 2 p. m. today, to Rear Admiral Luther Sheldon, jr. (MC USN) by the District Medical Society.

The convention, which is limited to the medical, nursing and allied professions, both in military and civilian service, will begin this morning with scientific meetings to be addressed by leading medical authorities.

A luncheon meeting will be held in the hotel at 12:30. Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, Surgeon General of the United States Army, will speak. At 7 o'clock tonight, a dinner meeting of the Women's Medical Society will be addressed by Maj. Margaret D. Craighill, of the U. S. Army Medical Corps, on "Women in the Army Medical Department."

Speakers before the convention tomorrow will include Dr. J. Heng Liu, former minister of public health for the government of China, and Representative Joseph W. Martin (Republican) of Massachusetts. The Congressman will address a public meeting in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower, at 8:30 p. m. Exhibits will be thrown open to the public for an hour and a half on Friday night, from 7 to 8:30.

Services Planned

Plans for Armistice Day services will be made at a meeting of the Second Division Association of the D. C. Branch AEF of World War I, tomorrow at 8:15 p. m., at the New Colonial Hotel.

Patient Morale, Medical Care Called Excellent at Gallinger

used to "restrain" violent patients although such restraint was not regarded as "acceptable treatment."

He explained that disturbed mental cases could not be segregated from more normal persons because of the problem of heating and ventilating the rooms originally intended for seclusion purposes.

Says Witness Is Mental Case

Concerning Lawrence Tucker, formerly employed in the laundry at Gallinger, who testified Monday that the teeth of a patient were knocked out by another patient on one occasion in the psychiatric ward, Doctor Gilbert said:

"Tucker has been known to the hospital since 1929. He has had 19 admissions to Gallinger for mental observation since that time."

"But I've known people who were crazy who could still tell the truth," interjected Bushfield.

"Certainly," Gilbert agreed. "Tucker has malingered mental disorders and suffers from constitutional physchopathic inferiority, fundamental instability and pathological lying, in which he is unable to distinguish childish fancies from the truth."

Explains "Brutality"

He declared that the patient whose teeth had been knocked out was assaulting one of the nurses, and that another patient had stepped in and subdued the other man, "probably saving the life of the nurse."

Dr. Gilbert also answered complaints against brutality, described in letters from relatives of patients, with the explanation that mentally disturbed, dangerous persons were restrained only when they endangered their own safety.

A surprise witness was Mrs. Bertha H. Morton, 506 B st. ne., one of those who wrote to Senator Bushfield describing the condition of her 20-year-old son while he was at Gallinger.

"Billy lost 13 pounds in 17 days there and was in a most upset state, filled with fear, agony and humility," Mrs. Morton said. "I saw a black and blue spot on his cheek and asked him if he had been hit, but he wouldn't say yes or no. Then, just after he was removed to St. Elizabeths, I arrived one night to find him climbing on some wires on the fourth floor and he told me that he was trying 'to get away from Joe.' I finally found out that there were three attendants at Gallinger named Joe, although no one with whom he came in contact at St. Elizabeths was called that."

If every person in Washington—including you—buys just one $18.75 bond in the next three days we can reach the 94-million-dollar District quota.

Bocock Supported

On evidence submitted by Gallinger Hospital's chaplain, the Rev. Joseph L. Shantz, whom they finance, Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church's Gallinger Hospital committee last night adopted a resolution of confidence in Supt. Edgar A. Bocock and his administration.

Admitting some conditions needing correction due to wartime stresses, the committee condemned the present congressional investigation. It stated: "We regret the type of evidence that is being relied upon to bring this great hospital into general disrepute."

Artists Attain Heights of Skill, Emotion in Brahms Concert

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents on Wednesday night the fifth in a series of eight concerts devoted to the instrumental chamber music of Johannes Brahms. Artists: William Kroll, violin; Naoum Benditzki, violoncello; Weldon Wilber, horn; Frank Sheridan, piano. Program: Piano Trio in C minor, Op. 101; Violin and Piano Sonata in A major, Op. 100; Trio in E flat major for violin, horn and piano, Op. 40.

One feels certain that Johannes Brahms himself would have had a good time last evening in a ghostly way at the fifth of the concerts devoted to his instrumental chamber music in Coolidge Auditorium, which was filled with auditors alternately absorbed and noisily demonstrative. It was an occasion of excellent ensemble playing, admirably proportioned, technically expert, flexibly expressive and remarkably consentient in spirit. Even those for whom Brahms' trios and sonatos are an old, old story found much satisfaction in the way in which the retelling was done. It was a thoroughly artistic performance marked by sensitiveness and finesse, by vigor and enthusiasm, by a communicative re-creation of romantic poesy.

BROWN

William Krell, who read so eloquently the G major violin sonata in a previous concert, duplicated his impassioned and restrained concentration in the E minor sonata. It was probably the easier for him to do this because he again had as collaborator at the piano Frank Sheridan, who has so accurate a sense of dynamic values in his instrument and so polished a style. The two artists were in perfect accord on every phrase and accent, in every nuance of coloring, and in each mode of interpretation. Neither of them yielded for a moment to the temptation of rhetorical flourish or exaggeration.

The humor of Brahms sparkles in this sonata which so deftly combines sincerity and mischievousness. There is an ironical salute to Wagner in the opening theme that starts out to be the "Preislied" and becomes something quite different, and a smiling bow to Grieg in the vivace section of the andante. Moreover, he quotes from his own lieder, which is always a sign that he is in jovial mood.

The choice of Frank Sheridan as the pianist in this series was once more justified by his work in the C minor trio and the E flat major trio wherein his touch and his self-effacing attention to the beauties of the music were wholly commendable. In the horn trio Weldon Wilber showed a control of tone and a facility of technique that made him a worthy coadjutor.

The compositions perform.d were examples of the essential qualities in Brahms, a conscientious craftsman whose workmanship exceeded his invention. Back in 1594, Michael Drayton in one of his sonnets had a line for it: "He framed him wings with feathers of his thought." That is, his fantasy carried him on romantic flight with material that was common to his generation. He had little to say that had not already been said by his predecessors and his originality was small, but he spoke of everyday matters in a manner that beautified and sometimes ennobled them.

200,000 D.C. Families Told Of Work Plan

New War Training Program Taking Shape; Information Available at USES

In anticipation of an intensified labor recruiting program, outlined in the new area manpower plan to go into effect October 15, more than 200,000 Washington families were surveyed by the U. S. Employment Service this month, Area Director Fred Z. Hetzel said yesterday, to acquaint the people with "expanding local pre-employment war training programs."

The new plan has not been announced yet, but manpower officials indicated last week that its main features will be "high-powered" recruiting and fuller utilization of manpower for the war effort.

It was also pointed out that the manpower problem here is different from most other areas since the main shortages in Washington exist in the service industries, while construction and other specialized workers actually are being exported for shipyards and other heavy industries.

Hetzel said enrollment in training schools here now totals more than 500 men and women and pointed out that courses given at District Vocational Schools include aircraft, auto mechanics, drafting, electricity, machine shop, radio, sheet metal and welding. All information, he declared, is available at the USES, 501 K st. nw., or at Franklin School, 13th and K sts. nw.

In pointing to the Kaiser Shipyard recruiting drive for 10,000 workers for West Coast plants, Hetzel stressed that "only inexperienced men not needed by local war or locally needed industries will be eligible for the Kaiser welding courses."

Victory Sidelights

Dimout Vow To Be Asked Of 4200

A pledge of voluntary adherence to the dimout in the Washington business area, proposed by the Office of War Utilities, will be sent next Monday, October 4, to 4200 local businessmen by the Washington Board of Trade, Clarence Arata, executive secretary, announced yesterday.

Meanwhile, it was learned a proclamation urging individual cooperation of householders and businessmen here in conserving all types of fuel will be released today by the District Commissioners.

The city-wide dimout plan has already enlisted the support of Washington's motion picture industry, utilities, large department and chain stores, and financial and insurance houses. It is expected to be in general effect early next week, although theater marquees will be darkened in the next few days, in accordance with theater owenrs' agreement. Woodward & Lothrop, it was stated by advertising manager James Hardy, has begun preparations for a 50 per cent cut in display and interior lighting.

Indorse Coupons Now

The OPA yesterday advised motorists that they should indorse every gasoline coupon in their ration books at once and not one at a time as they buy gasoline. It was explained that this procedure protects consumers against use of their coupons by others in the event of loss or theft. It also helps to locate persons trafficking in illegal gasoline, it was said.

Salesman to Be Guest

"Phil Bobys Night," at which the Washington motion picture salesman will be guest of honor, will be held Monday at 8:30 p. m. by the Variety Club of Washington in the Willard Hotel.

The party, in honor of Bobys' 30 years of service, will be sponsored by the Washington Salesmen's Club, the Metro Pep Club and motion picture exhibitors. "Kings for the night" will be Harry Cohen, Fred Klein, Harry Bachman and Buck Stover.

Board Will Meet

The board of directors of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club will meet tomorrow night in the Hotel Ambassador. Included in the agenda will be a report on the camp's summer work by Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger, director of the Boys Club at Scotland, Md.

Church to Mail Gifts

Members of Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capitol st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., will mail Christmas packages to men in the armed forces following a special service tomorrow at 8 p. m. The speaker will be Marine Staff Sergt. Richard T. Wright.

Woman Accused of Kidnaping Baby Born to Unwed Mother

The wife of a Navy warrant officer was charged yesterday with kidnaping the 18-day-old daughter of an unwed mother here and both women were accused of conspiracy to defraud the United States of hospital fees at the time of the child's birth.

Details of the conspiracy were revealed at a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage when the women were held for the action of the grand jury and released on bonds totaling $1,500.

Identified as Catherine Samarzo, 22, and Mrs. Myrie Mary McGuire, 25, both of 229 10th st. se., the two were arrested at their home on Tuesday night by Policeman Charles Scott, Fifth Precinct. They denied the charges.

Miss Samarzo, according to police, posed as Mrs. McGuire at both the Navy Dispensary and Providence Hospital, where her daughter was born, September 13. A waitress, Samarzo had come to Washington about a year ago from Fairmont, W. Va., and had found a room at the McGuire home in May. She was an expectant mother at that time, it was said.

She testified yesterday that Mrs. McGuire had agreed to pay for her prenatal care and hospitalization if she, Miss Samarzo, would agree to give the baby to Mrs. McGuire.

Subsequently, Miss Samarzo said, Mrs. McGuire contacted her husband, Warrant Officer Joseph John McGuire at Seattle, Wash., and obtained from him the papers necessary to obtain free care at the Naval Clinic.

Miss Samarzo's baby was born on September 13, she said, and she was discharged from Providence Hospital four days later. She then returned to the McGuire home with the baby, whose name was registered as Jo Ann Mary McGuire.

Last Sunday, according to testimony, Miss Samarzo left the house for a walk and when she returned the baby was missing. When she asked the child's whereabouts, she was beaten, she testified, and told to get out of the house because the baby belonged to Mrs. McGuire.

Under questioning by Attorney Albert Lyman, Miss Samarzo admitted she signed "a paper" before going to the hospital, but said she thought it was "a sugar rationing application." The paper, according to the lawyer, was an agreement giving the child to Mrs. McGuire.

The Police Department Women's Bureau took the infant into custody Tuesday night, and the child was being held for the Board of Public Welfare pending disposition of the cases.

Supreme Court Gets OPA Plea In Gas Rates

The United States Supreme Court was petitioned yesterday to review a lower court decision granting the Washington Gas Light Co. a $200,000 annual increase in gas rates for 1942-1943.

The Justice Department filed the petition on behalf of the Office of Economic Stabilization and the Office of Price Administration and contended wartime rate increases by public utilities can be allowed only when there is "a clear showing the increase is necessary." The petition states the increase allowed the gas company by the United States Court of Appeals here was inflationary.

Solicitor General Charles Fahy, in the petition, said "The legal issues posed by the case are of great importance to the national stabilization program." Further, it states, "We maintain in a wartime economy where there is constant, pervasive pressure on prices, wages and rates to rise, effective stabilization is possible only if all increases are denied to the beneficiaries of stabilization which they do not clearly show to be necessary."

Figures were cited indicating the company earned a return of 5 per cent after all taxes were deducted.

U. S. Workers Plan First War Fund Report

Called upon by the President for "full cooperation" in the Community War Fund, Government Division volunteer workers, who have pledged half of Washington's $4,800,000 quota, will hold their opening luncheon tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. in the Hotel Statler.

Meanwhile, it was reported that another campaign luncheon, sponsored by 67 women's organizations, will be held for diplomatic, social, political and women's groups at the Hotel Mayflower on Saturday, October 16. Columnist Walter Lippmann will talk on "Relations of Social Service to War" and will autograph copies of his books, "United States Foreign Policy."

Speaker at the "educational" session for Federal volunteers will be G. Howland Shaw, assistant secretary of state, while Preston Delano, chairman of the Government Division of 21 sections, will preside.

The President's message yesterday urged "all employes to remember, when they are approached for their contributions, that this is an opportunity through sacrifice to reach their friends and neighbors at home and our men and women in the service, and also to carry a message to the far-flung fronts which are our shield."

City News in Brief

Oakley Pritchard, 38, of 920 C st. se., was treated at Gallinger Hospital early yesterday for a scalp cut suffered, police reported, when he was struck with a night stick by Pvt. James C. O'Connor, 27, of the Fifth Precinct.

Pritchard, being arrested on a drunkenness charge, had struck the policeman in the mouth and attempted to seize the night stick, police reported. Pritchard was taken to the Fifth Precinct station on drunkenness and assault charges following the hospital treatment, police reported.

Woman Grocer Fined $25

Mrs. Lillian Shochet, proprietor of a grocery store at 335 C st. se., was fined $25 in Municipal Court yesterday when she was found guilty of having in her store over 10 pounds of candy containing worms. The fine was administered by Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn.

"Issues Facing the Current Congress" will be discussed by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia at a meeting of the D. C. Chapter of the National Lawyer's Guild today at 8 p. m. in the National Archives Building Auditorium, 7th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Labor Leader to Speak

Elizabeth Curley Flynn, prominent labor leader and author of the recent pamphlet "Women in the War," will be the principal speaker at a "Back the Attack in 1943" mass meeting at the Press Club auditorium tomorrow night.

Miss Flynn, an active member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, was secretary of the Citizens' Committee to Free Earl Browder in 1942 and formerly chairman of the International Labor Defense.

Jews Begin Observance Of New Year

Rosh Hashana Prayers Plead For Liberation Of Oppressed

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

As sunset tinted the skies above the Potomac last night, Washington's Jewry began observing Rosh Hashana, their New Year 5704, with prayers for liberation of their brethren under modern Pharaohs' yokes.

Echoing Jewish citizenry's sentiments, Secretary of State Cordell Hull said that it was appropriate at this time "to rejoice together over the world's quickening hope."

In a statement commemorating the start of the New Year, Hull said that it seems fitting "to express my constant sympathy with them in their sorrow over those of their religior who still live and die in the deep shado of persceution.

Cause for Rejoicing

"It is also appropriate at this time," declared the Secretary, "for us to rejoice together over the world's quickening hope for the dawn of a new year in which we may realize peace at last for all the great brotherhood of mankind."

The crowds in synagogues and temples were swelled by hundreds of men and women in uniform, many of whom also worshiped at special rites arranged by service organizations.

A note of interfaith harmony and cooperation was evident in the local observance. Members of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., again permitted the Washington Hebrew Congregation use of its building for an additional service.

The Clarendon (Va.) Methodist Church invited the newly-formed congregation of the Arlington Jewish Community Center to use its building—because the Center's facilities are too small for the Holy Day throngs in the growing suburbs. Rabbi Samuel H. Berkowitz is the Center's spiritual leader.

Washington Observances

Rabbi Julius Morgenstern, president of Cincinnati's Hebrew Union College, has been guest of the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Congregation for the High Holy Days. He spoke last night at the Temple, and will speak today at 10:30 a. m. at First Church. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, preached last night at First Church, and will speak today at 10:30 a. m. at the Temple. A reception will take place in the Temple Library after today's Rosh Hashana services.

The simple Maariv rites last night signaled today's formal launching of the new year at services, where cantors will blow 30 blasts on the shofar (ram's horn), summoning the faithful to penitence and reflection. Rosh Hashanah initiates a ten-day period of prayer and meditation, culminating in Yom Kippur—Day of Atonement, beginning at sundown, October 8.

Uniforms at Service

Indicative of a world at war, throngs of Jewish men and women of the armed forces mingled last night at Rosh Hashanah services at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw., under the sponsorship of the Army and Navy committee of the Jewish Welfare Board.

Among the distinguished guest cantors here for the High Holy Days is Cantor Abraham Matts of Montreal, Canada, who chanted services last night at B'nai Israel Synagogue, 14th and Emerson sts. nw. Rabbi Henry Segal preached.

The Rosh Hashanah celebration will run one day among reformed Jews, and two days among orthodox and conservative Jews.

2 Moslems Plead Guilty to Evasion Of Draft Laws

Guilty pleas in Selective Service Act violation cases involving those who profess to be Moslems here were recorded for the first time in District Court yesterday.

Although there had been more than 15 cases earlier involving Moslems, all had pleaded not guilty and with the exception of two men who agreed to enter the Army, all were convicted.

Joseph M. Fagins, 18, Negro, pleaded guilty before Justice David Pine to failing to register with his draft board. According to Assistent United States Attorney John Conliff, Fagins claimed he was exempt from the draft because he was a member of the Nation of Islam and therefore of the universe. Fagins' brother, father and brother-in-law all had been convicted of violating the Draft Act.

Clarence Barnes, 23, Negro, pleaded guilty to failing to return to his draft board a supplemental questionnaire.

Maximum sentence for violation of the Selective Training and Service Act is 20 months to 5 years in prison.

Wife Shares Great Love on Fine Friendship Basis With Long Married Man, Who Plans Divorce Now His Children Are Grown; Should She Follow Suit?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is a case of two "right" people in a "wrong" set of circumstances. I am a wife and mother,—and deeply in love with another woman's husband, as he is with me. We have kept our relationship on a plane of very fine friendship; and our devotion to each other meets a long-felt need in the life of each. Neither of us had ever before known that "meeting of true minds," that complete understanding, that feeling of "oneness," which exists between us. Our interests are the same,—even to our religion and outlook on life.

He has kept his home together for many years, for the sake of children now grown; and intends to get a divorce soon. I married some years ago, as a supposed cure for loneliness, and have experienced no real satisfaction in the marriage. However, we have a young daughter,—my step-daughter, whose mother died when she was six months old. I was married to her father two years later, and have learned to love her as if she were my own. And, in addition, I have an invalid mother to support. Although she lives in the West, for reasons of health, my husband and I pay most of her expenses, including rent and a monthly allowance. For their sakes, I have remained with my husband, who knows about this; and although he loves me, he does not wish me to remain with him if I do not love him.

While I appreciate all he has done for me, I know that I do not love him and never will. However, I have tried to act as if I did, out of a sense of duty to the family and because I hesitate to break up a home in which I am the only unhappy member. If we separated, my husband would claim the child, of course; and I would go on supporting my mother for her lifetime. My problem is this: Should I openly take my stand, declaring my love for the other man and thus release my husbond from a situation which is terribly unfair to him? It would give him a chance to find someone who really could love him. My friend and I feel that we cannot renounce each other,—as we feel it would be losing the better part of ourselves. And we also feel that the situation, as it is at present, is unfair to all concerned. What should we do? L. W. A.

Don't Be Too Hasty In Burning Bridges

DEAR L. W. A.: Taking a practical view of the situation, and without meaning (necessarily) to imply cynical distrust of the alleged great love you are now sharing, in fine friendship's guise, with the other man, I believe it will be time enough to confront your husband with an open declaration of your feelings and hopes in that regard, AFTER the other man has precipitated action definitely leading to absolute divorce from his wife,—as factual guarantee (plainly confided to you as such) that he does sincerely desire and soberly intend to make a legitimate place in his life for you.

I say this because it is reasonable to assume that if and when you put a stick of dynamite under the present materially comfortable set-up, which is not without its sentimental consolations to you,—it will be with the idea of proceeding immediately to transfer yourself, lock, stock and barrel, into an even more satisfactory arrangement, from your viewpoint. And at the moment, you simply DON'T KNOW (and neither does anyone else) whether such a place ever will be cleared for you, in the other man's life. And I assume that if you KNEW, positively, today, that he never would obtain a divorce,—perhaps for reasons outside his control,—you would begin philosophically to see real profit in staying where you are; and would want to keep your relations with your husband as decent and conventionally agreeable as possible.

Regrets Are Inevitable But Peace Can Be Won

In other words, it is distinctly my impression that you would NOT be interested in divorcing your husband and turning him loose to find someone else "who really could love him,"—simply because you don't care for him as much as you care for another man,—IF that procedure meant you were sentencing yourself to be completely "on your own," cut off from the child you love, and forlornly responsible for an invalid mother's support. And even supposing you might,—in high flights of emotional fancy, frustration-bred,—seriously speculate on doing just that, I doubt that you have "what it takes" to sustain you along that solitary way. Witness the fact that you got married in the first place to escape from loneliness.

And, on the other hand, speaking,—as you do,—in terms of "being fair" to your husband: In view of the fact that he benevolently loves you just "as is," so truly and kindly, indeed, that he would not want you to stay with him from a sense of duty, I cannot see that you would be making any positive contribution to his permanent welfare, in casting him off simply because he doesn't satisfy your romantic yearning for perfect understanding,—thus seriously undermining his self-esteem, shaking his confidence in human character to its very foundations, and upsetting his child's life into the bargain. In my opinion, as between staying married and arranging a new deal of partners (if such could be done),—the former course is the one most likely to confer the greatest good upon the greatest number, in the long run. Either course will involve some lasting regrets for you, no doubt; but I think the former will bring you most peace of heart, as time goes by. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Foreign Bodies in Child's Ear Complicate Parents' Problems

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

The baby is sitting on the kitchen floor helping mother, and a pea or bean drops on the floor and baby picks it up and finds it just fits in the ear, so in it goes. And then trouble starts. Why does the baby do it? Heaven knows. One who was old enough to understand the question replied, "I don't know any other place to put it." Which is about as good an answer as any.

While it is usually babies who stuff foreign bodies in the ear, the practice is by no means confined to them. Some show-off starts to impress his girl at a party and before you know it he has a small button in his external auditory canal.

Situation Serious

The situation is a serious one and requires a doctor to handle it. Clumsy efforts of parents or friends often result in simply pushing the foreign body further into the ear, getting it wedged there, and even perforating the drum. One of the worst things to do is to squirt water into the ear with the idea of washing out the invader. In the case of a pea or bean or a seed the water simply makes the object swell up and get tighter stuck than ever. One ear specialist instills alcohol in such cases in order to shrink the vegetable matter.

Even with the aid of an otoscope with which he can look in the ear and with a light see the whole situation, a doctor may not be able to get out the foreign body immediately. It causes an inflammation of the skin which is brought on also, by the way, by the clumsy attempts of the layman aforementioned and the ear swells up, tightening its grip on the object. It may be necessary to apply an icebag to the ear for several hours before the swelling has subsided enough to permit operative procedures.

Sometimes no one is to blame but by bad luck an insect crawls into the external ear and makes a nice, warm nest. Wood ticks commonly are the offenders, the victim being a camper. It is good practice for the doctor to kill the insect first by instilling a drop or two of chloroform before starting removal because in the case of wood ticks, they hang on. That much chloroform will not injure or blister the ear drum.

The complications of foreign bodies may be as serious as a bad ear infection. One extraordinary case is related of an eraser from the end of a lead pencil removed from the ear. One year later the ear started to discharge and finally a radical mastoidectomy was done and a fragment of the eraser removed.

The lesson is the old one—not to put anything smaller than your elbow into your ear.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

One slice of bread that has to be thrown away in a week does not strike the home-maker as a waste of food. But multiply that one slice by all the homes in America over a period of a year and you get a staggering figure—100 million loaves of bread wasted!

We have our eyes open sufficiently to the value of food in wartime. It actually is on a par with ammunition as a weapon. In terms of war production, waste of food is waste of manpower. Any way you look at it, throwing away any is senseless.

The American housewife has plenty of credit coming to her for the way she has cut down to wartime rations. But, as with the single slice of bread, it is easy to regard the spoilage of little dabs of food as too insignificant to count. Take that cup of carrots you put in the ice box and forgot about it until it had to be thrown away. Isn't it wasted just as surely as if you had taken it piping hot from the stove and dumped it in the garbage can? And what if every other housewife happened to do the same thing the same week—we'd have a mountain of carrots in our national food scrap heap, and that isn't salvage.

It may be that you don't waste any food, but throw away the vitamins. Be sure always to cook the vegetables in a small amount of water and use all the vgetable liquid. In cooking meats, start them in a hot oven to seal in the juices, then turn the flame low to keep the meat from shrinking.

Whenever you eat in a hotel or restaurant, order only the amount of food you can eat—and without overeating. Overeating is no saving of food. You can't use more food than you need, and it turns into fat, a health liability. If you leave food on your plate, it has to be thrown out. Take what you need, but eat what you take.

And let's once and for all time do away with that silly "etiquet" rule of leaving a little food on the plate. That never did make sense. In these times, I don't think it's even bad manners to pick up a lamb chop or chicken drumstick to gnaw off the meat.

We have a new food conservation slogan—"Clean up your plate and clean up the Axis!" Let's do it!

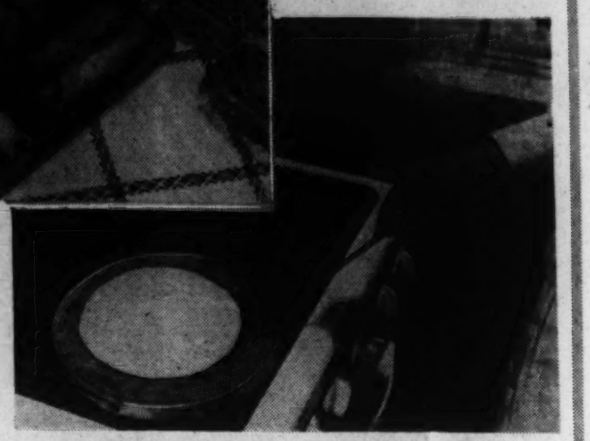
Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Tender Griddle Cakes Hot Off the Stove Give Warmhearted Hospitality to Diners.



You may not receive a jeweled ring and a hat as one famous chef did as reward for the superior pancakes he made. You will get great satisfaction if you know how to flap a griddle cake to tenderness.

Martha Ellyn

Griddle cakes are grand breakfast fare. They are the kind of food too which will fortify you for a busy day. But don't confuse them as a food to be served just at the morning meal, for they can be served for party fare with assurance that they are quite "correct."

Let's consider griddle cakes all the way from breakfast to company dinner. Just straight griddle cakes are the favorite of many. Others like the tanginess of raised buckwheat cakes. The recipes for both of these follow:

GRIDDLE CAKES

Sift together 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Add 1 beaten egg; 2¼ to 2½ cups milk and ¼ cup melted shortening to flour mixture and mix well. Bake on hot ungreased griddle or skillet. Makes about 35 4-inch griddle cakes.

RAISED BUCKWHEAT CAKES

Pour 2 cups boiling water over ½ cup cornmeal and let stand until it swells. Soften ½ yeast cake in ¼ cup lukewarm water. After the cornmeal is cooled, add 1 tablespoon molasses, 1 teaspoon salt, the dissolved yeast and 2 cups buckwheat flour. Beat thoroughly and set in a warm place to rise over night. It should rise and fall again in the morning. Then add a teaspoon of soda dissolved in 1/3 cup hot milk, stir well and bake on a hot griddle.

When the cakes are desired frequently (say, three times a week), fresh yeast will not be required after the first making, if a little more than a pint of the batter is reserved each time and kept in a cool place to be used instead of the yeast. Molasses in buckwheat cakes helps to give them a good color in frying. Without it, they may be gray and unattractvie.

Buckwheat cakes can also be made without yeast. Sour milk makes a delicious buckwheat cake. Following is a recipe for making in this way:

BUCKWHEAT CAKES

Sift before measuring ½ cup bread flour. Then resift with ½ teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons sugar or molasses. If molasses is used, add it to the milk. Add 1½ cups buckwheat flour. Pour into a bowl, 3¼ cups sour milk or buttermilk. Add 2 tablespoons melted shortening. Add the dry ingredients. Beat the batter until it is blended only. Bake and serve as soon as possible.

If you want to serve a purse-string meal, the following menu using griddle cakes is recommended:

Purse-String Dinner Menu

Cheese Griddle Cakes
Hot Apple Sauce Sausage
Vegetable Salad
Fresh Fruit Compote
Cookies Beverage.

The recipe for the Cheese Griddle Cakes follows:

CHEESE GRIDDLE CAKES

Sift together 2½ cups sifted enriched flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Mix in ¾ cup grated cheese. Beat 1 egg and combine with 2¼ to 2½ cups milk and 1 tablespoon melted shortening. Add to flour mixture and mix thoroughly. Bake on hot greased griddle or skillet. Makes 30 4-inch griddle cakes.

If you want to go de luxe with pancakes, roll them in jelly-like fashion, brush with melted butter or margarine, sprinkle with sugar and roll. Sprinkle with lemon juice and sugar and set under broiler for about ½ minute. You can also place bits of ham, bacon or sausage on the pancakes before you roll them and brown them under the broiler. The following is the way to make the Pancakes De Luxe:

PANCAKES DE LUXE

Sift together 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Beat 2 eggs and add 2¼ to 2½ cups milk and ¼ cup melted shortening. Add to flour mixture. Mix to smooth batter. Pour ½ cup batter at a time on lightly greased griddle, tipping it so as to make the batter run out to the edges. Bake over moderate heat until underside of pancake is evenly browned and top side is cooked. Do not turn. Brush lightly with melted butter or margarine; sprinkle with sugar and roll like a jelly-roll. Sprinkle with lemon juice and more sugar. Set under broiler for ½ minute. Makes about 6 pancakes.

Remove Hard Water Scale

Many new Washington housewives are discouraged to find the inside of their precious enameled pans coated with a lime deposit. This hard-water scale may be removed by boiling a mild solution of bicarbonate of soda in the utensil periodically and then washing with hot water and soap.

Cool Enamel Slowly

When enameled utensils are overheated, set them aside to cool gradually. Sudden changes of temperature may injure the sanitary enamel finish.

THE GENTLER SEX

IN RETROSPECT

(A Postwar Soliloquy)

By Malvina Lindsay

NO one could have said I was not patriotic,
For after all I did as much as I was able,
You see I have never been especially strong,
And Eustace—that's my husband—
Would not let me do a lot of things that other women did,
Because he did not want me ailing,
And anyway no woman can afford to let herself slip,
Men being what they are . . .

BESIDES there was that enormous house,
And the maid only coming three times a week,
And we did quite a bit of entertaining,
I think that's especially important for morale in wartime,
Then shopping took a lot out of me—
Not that I hoarded ever—but merely keeping ahead of the shortages,
Buying cleverly enough always to have an adequate reserve,
That was a full-time occupation,
Even with a B card for driving.

ANYWAY I know that I did as much as a lot of my neighbors,
I helped roll bandages—whenever I wasn't too busy.
What is more, I signed up for civilian defense,
And worked a day or two at typing—
Until it made my back ache; and I was always very careful
Not to use my car for pleasure—I would always call a taxi,
While in every bond drive I—that is, myself and husband,
Made liberal investment of all our extra funds,
And at rates much lower
Than mortgages or stocks would net us.

AND yet . . . and yet . . .
When women talk so much today of what they did and suffered,
Of how they helped build airplanes, ships,
Or took a man's place at the corner grocery,
Of how they scrubbed and cooked and washed, with muscles tired and aching,
Of how they patched and darned, made dresses over,
Or wore clothes old and drab, and went without new things they yearned for,
To buy another bond—it makes me almost wish—
No, that is foolish for I really did as much as any of them,
Considering everything . . .

YOU see the truth is I was never really very strong,
And then Eustace wanted the house kept nicely . . .
(I wonder if it's only my imagination
That they make me feel like an outsider).
Anyway, why should they act as if the war belonged to them?
Why should they talk about their experiences with such glowing faces?
Why should they make me feel so callow and unlived?
Oh nonsense! I know sacrifice as much as anybody!
Don't I know what war is? Didn't I go without steak . . . or gasoline? Stay home in summer?

ANYWAY this is my country as much as theirs,
Didn't my people come here in 1620?
Didn't my ancestors distinguish themselves in battle?
If you don't believe it, I can show the records.
Didn't my husband's sister's oldest boy,
Pilot a fighter plane in the South Pacific?
There was all that strain to endure . . . and then the house, and I was always so busy,
I tell you this is my country—we both bought bonds,
Eustace and I, and gave up better interest,
And even put off getting a new rug,
And anyway I was never especially strong—
I do not see what more I could have done, considering . . .

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

One has to figure very carefully from cause to effect, otherwise one is inclined to attribute to trivial causes the answer to major behavior.

Mrs. A. W. C., for instance, seems to have put too much faith for her children's excellent physical condition in their sleeping positions.

"I read your column and others on baby care," she writes, "and because I have three babies of my own I wonder why no one ever says anything about putting a baby on its stomach to sleep. I began this when my babies were a few days old. They use their muscles much sooner and are soon crawling on a hard surface for a few minutes at a time.

"I got a lot of amusement out watching one of my babies lifting herself from the bed by using her shoulders and feet. She was only about 2 moths old. This same baby, crawled at 4 months, pulled herself up at 5½ and swung herself out of her bed, holding by her hands, at 7 months. She walked at 9. The others walked at 8 and 11 months, all because I let them lie on their stomachs and use their muscles from the beginning. This position gives them nice-shaped heads, too."

I applaud your babies' progress but I do not share your opinion that it was all due to their sleeping positions. Many a tummy-sleeping baby cannot match it. It wasn't their sleeping positions that gave them both the brains and the brawn to walk and crawl so early.

It is fine for babies to sleep on their tummies, but it had best be started after the sixth week when every baby will be able to lift his head easily. Otherwise, he might bury his nose and be unable to free it easily. There is some danger of that.

But no ill-fed baby would be able to manage himself just because he slept on his stomach. Precociousness has far more causes.

Diplomatic Wife Tours Country To Recruit Red Cross Personnel

Mme. Colbjornsen Speaking First In St. Louis

By Peggy Preston

Runners-up to Mrs. Roosevelt for Red Cross traveling honors, is Mme. Ole Colbjornsen, golden-haired wife of the financial counselor at the Norwegian Embassy.

With several thousand miles of travel for the District Chapter already on her side, Norwegian-born Mme. Colbjornsen left yesterday on the first lap of a Nation-wide speaking tour for the national organization. Her first stop: St. Louis. Her aim: to recruit Nurses' Aides and nurses for the armed services.

Her current swing across the middle West is to be a comparatively brief one and will be concluded in about ten days. But National headquarters has an extensive itinerary mapped out for its new 'discovery.' Before spring rolls around again, the daughter of the late distinguished Norwegian scientist, Dr. Sopp, will have appeared in dozens of cities and towns from Boston to San Francisco.

MME. COLBJORNSEN

Serves Here as Nurses' Aide

One of the most popular speakers for the District Red Cross Chapter, Mme. Colbjornsen has had a busy time of it since her arrival in Washington a year or so ago. Despite her duties with the Speaker's Bureau and those of a diplomatic wife, she has managed to keep up her scheduled hours of work as a nurse's aide at Georgetown Hospital, but this winter she will have little time for the latter.

Slender and tall, with amazing blue eyes, Julia Marie Colbjornsen is a persuasive picture on the speaker's stand. With her ear-catching accent, this former actress gives her audiences a thrilling story of life in occupied Norway.

Her dramatic escape from the Germans was made in the spring of 1941, when she made her way to Sweden alone on skis. Mr. Colbjornsen, a former member of the Norwegian Parliament, had left earlier with the King, taking with him the Norwegian gold reserves.

Arrived in New York Via Long Route

Three months to a day after leaving her home, the much-traveled Mme. Colbjornsen reached New York. Her journeys had carried her from Stockholm to Moscow via plane, and hence to Odessa. From that city she sailed on a Russian steamer to Istanbul, continuing to Baghdad and India. Her trip to New York was aboard a ship routed from Bombay, via Capetown and Trinidad.

Following their reunion in this country, the Colbjornsens took up quarters in Washington where they live quietly at 3134 Dumbarton st., devoting most of their time to Norwegian relief work. Before her marriage Mme. Colbjornsen was a well known member of the professional theatrical sets in Oslo and Paris, a background that serves her well in her present job.

Miss Anne Greene Named to Post In Red Cross

Mrs. George Angus Garrett, chairman of Volunteer Special Services for the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross, today announced the appointment of Miss Anne Carter Greene as vice chairman of Volunteer Special Services.

Miss Greene is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Louis Greene and the niece of the well-known Washington eye specialist, Dr. John W. Burke. From 1936-37 she served as president of the Washington Junior League and at present is on the Junior League's advisory board. In addition she is a member of the board of directors for Children's Hospital.

From her desk in the spacious new Red Cross quarters in the DAR Building, Miss Greene will assist Mrs. Garrett in administering the Volunteer Special Services of the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross. Included in these services are Gray Ladies, Nurses' Aides, Staff Assistants, Motor Corps, Canteen Corps, Production and Home Service. With the exception of Production and Home Service, headquarters for these services are located in the DAR Building.

Mrs. Le Bourgeois Off for West After Visit in Alexandria

Now Making Home in Oklahoma Where Husband Is Stationed at McAlester

Following a month's visit with their relatives in Alexandria, Mrs. Henry Blow Le Bourgeois and her young son, Henry Blow 3d, are leaving tomorrow to return to McAlester, Okla., where they will rejoin Mr. Le Bourgeois. The family has been living in the Middle West since May, having moved from Alexandria.

Mrs. Le Bourgeois and Henry have been visting her mother-in-law, Mrs. John Lesslie Hall, jr., wife of Rear Admiral Hall, at her apartment at Hunting Terrace, 1200 South Washington st. They also spent part of their stay with Mrs. Le Bourgeois' mother, Mrs. Harry Hampton Palmer, at 212 Wolfe st.

The former Miss Marjorie Loring Palmer, Mrs. Le Bourgeois and her husband, the son of Mrs. Hall and the late Comdr. Henry Blow Le Bourgeois, USN, made their home in Fairfax County until this summer. In May he was transferred from the United States Naval Torpedo Station in Alexandria to the Naval Ammunition Depot at McAlester.

Recently Mr. and Mrs. Le Bourgeois sold their country place in Franconia, Fairfax County, as they expect to make their home for an indefinite period in Oklahoma. Their farm is near "Rose Hill," for many years the estate of Mrs. Hall's family, the Daingerfields.

Mrs. Hall, the former Beall Daingerfield, whose grandfather, John Bathurst Daingerfield, made many outstanding philanthropic contributions to his home town, Alexandria, has been named by Secretary of the Navy Knox, at the suggestion of Mayor William Thomas Wilkins, to sponsor the frigate and naval escort vessel USS Alexandria, which is to be launched at the American Shipbuilding Co. yards in Cleveland, Ohio.

The date of the launching is being withheld by the Navy until final arrangements are completed, but Mrs. Hall has chosen as one of her attendants Mrs. Charles H. Pozer of Fairfax Court House, who has been living in Bryson City, N. C., where Mr. Pozer is temporarily located.

Faces and Places About Washington

LIONS OF THE HOUR are those three junketing Senators who recently returned from their 40,000-mile 60-day around-the-world tour. Virtually every ambitious hostess in Washington is angling to get one or all of them to dinner, and before the season is over each one may have to write a book in self-defense . . . rather than tell his story over and over again.

Senator Brewster

As you know, the party that took off a couple of months ago included Senators Mead, Russell, Brewster, Chandler and Lodge, but when the plane put down at the Washington Airport on Tuesday, only three returned global travelers got off. Senator Lodge, a member of the Congressional Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, stopped in Honolulu; Senator Chandler stayed over in Hollywood for a visit with his wife and their film-actress daughter, Mimi.

Senator Brewster's first speech about his trip will be given at a special dinner meeting of the Women's National Press Club on Tuesday, and from what I can gather about plans—it's going to be a gala event. President Elisabeth May Craig, who writes for a string of Maine newspapers, has engaged the Willard's big ballroom, and reservations from club members and their distinguished guests already are pouring in.

Senator Brewster, incidentally, disposed of those 99 sticks of Maine spruce chewing gum in a manner that made friends for Maine in five continents. And he was tempted more than once also to give away that pair of rubber overshoes that Mrs. Brewster persuaded him to take along, even though they filled a lot of his limited luggage space. But they came in handy once when the rains came in India. Senator Brewster was the only one in the peripatetic quintet who had dry feet the entire time.

Soon as Senator Chandler returns, he should be given some kind of medal for singular courage. He doesn't like to fly, and for two months each time the plane took off, his fellow-travelers wondered if he would die of fright. But since the bravest men are those who face something of which they are afraid, it would seem Senator Chandler deserves a special badge of honor.

CAPITAL POTPOURRI: A diplomat who was among those rescued from the Burma jungle a few weeks ago inclosed a significant cartoon in a recent letter to his wife in Washington. It portrayed two famished and weary men stranded in a remote area . . . with one shouting to the other, "Don't worry—they'll find us! I didn't file any Income Tax report this year!" . . . Our town will lose one of its most attractive foreign couples in a few days when Baron and Baroness de la Tournelle leave for New York. They arrived here several months ago from Rio de Janeiro, where he was counselor of the French Embassy. His next post will be in Algiers . . .

Back from Mexico are the Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle, the latter of whom had hardly arrived here when she left again—this time for New York, where she will visit her sister, Cornelia Chapin, the sculptor, for a few days. The A. G. came back from Mexico by plane. Mrs. Biddle stopped off to visit an Air Corps nephew in San Antonio, and traveled on from there by train. . . .

V. E. Cornelius, erstwhile Second Secretary of the British Embassy, is in New York for a visit, and from there will return to England. He told friends here just before leaving that he hoped to return to his regiment—the regiment in which he was serving when he was wounded at Dunkirk. . . .

AT A GLANCE AT recent issues of the Congressional Record presents plenty of proof that Senators and Representatives are going poetic in a large and lavish fashion. On the opening day, six members requested that as many different poems be put into the record. Every day or two since, other poems have been included.

Representative Fritz Lanham of Texas, who can toss off original verse with less trouble than it takes to tell about it, consistently resists that impulse to have his poems printed at Government expense. He writes for his own amusement and the entertainment of his close friends. His poetry is merely a part of his big bag of parlor tricks, which also carries a Grade A magician's act (he's a member of American Society of Magicians and the International Brotherhood of Magicians, and knows more string tricks than you can shake a magic wand at).

Now and then, of course, some of his congressional cronies manage to get a few lines of Mr. Lanham's verse into the record. Back in 1932, for instance, his highly apropos poem, "A Brown Study," was included by a member of the Appropriations Committee, as partial "explanation" of why the Postmaster General should be allowed to purchase an automobile to conform to his hat specifications.

Rep. Lanham

Another of Mr. Lanham's topical poems was written "In Memory of Those Who Died at the Battle of the Budget Bill," and still another—a parody on "Sheridan's Ride" had to do with the failure of Vice President Dawes to reach the Senate chamber in time to break the tie vote which prevented the confirmation of a Cabinet officer.

Mr. Lanham's most recent poem, composed a few months ago, presents "The New Philosophy," and is a parody on the last stanza of Oliver Wendell Holmes' "The Chambered Nautilus." Remember how that goes—"Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul . . ." Well, the Lanham version runs as follows:

"Build thee more stately mansions, Uncle Sam,
As the swift seasons scram!
Leave thy old vaunted past!
Let each new venture, bolder than the last,
Show me my haven in thy bounty vast,
Till I have all things free,
Leaving my ungrown self in thriftless ecstasy!"

That bit of philosophy wasn't written for publication, and although much better than most verse that finds its way into the Congressional Record, it hasn't appeared there either. "As I said before," observed Mr. Lanham, "I write just for the fun of the thing."

Panama's Envoy Host to Press

Visiting Journalists Meet D. C. Scribes At Embassy Fete

An early autumn sun lured guests from indoors into the green garden at the Panamanian Embassy yesterday afternoon during the late afternoon party given by the Ambassador and Senora de Jimenez.

Guests of honor at this pleasant fete were the group of journalists from Panama who have been touring the United States and are winding up their visit with a week in Washington. The visitors include Eduardo Morgan, Carlos Sole Bosch and Enrique Veranecci, and sharing with them the hospitality of the hosts were newspapermen from Guatemala and Honduras, fellow travelers on their tour.

The Ambassador and Senora de Jimenez greeted their more than 200 guests in the long drawing room which overlooks the garden with a glimpse of Rock Creek Park beyond. The flower decked buffet table in the dining room was as is usual at most parties a popular spot during the afternoon.

Here and there were the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso, Senora de Guachalla, wife of the Bolivian Ambassador; the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senora de Castro and the Ambassador of Costa Rica and Senora de Escalante.

Others there were the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Troncoso, the Honduran Ambassador and Senora de Caceres, who had entertained for their visiting newsmen on Tuesday; Nelson Rockefeller, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director of the Pan American Union.

Vice President and Mrs. Wallace had been asked, so too had Senator Alben Barkley and Mrs. Barkley and Representative and Mrs. John W. McCormack, among representatives of the congressional contingent.

News of the Women's Clubs

All this week the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs is celebrating the birth of Soroptimism. Mrs. Harriet P. Tyler, federation president, issued a proclamation to that effect. At the same time, members everywhere and especially here in Washington are mourning the death of Mrs. Jean Bennett, former president of the local group and an immediate past president of the federation.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

It was the late Mrs. Bennett who so closely identified the local group with the national organization. Chartered in 1922, after the founding of the first Soroptimist Club in Oakland, Calif., the Washington Soroptimist Club gave to the national federation its first national president, Mrs. Ruby Lee Minor, and a vice president, Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis.

Since its organization the Washington Soroptimist Club has been a leader in civic and service projects. With the advent of the war, it geared its programs to intensive war services but at the same time continued its local civic aids. Actually the war services cover a large field, including the presentation of a mobile canteen to the National Red Cross, the buying of bonds to the tune of $200,000 and stamps around $3,000. Members serve as hostesses in canteens, do Red Cross, aid with salvage, make donations for training nurse's aides in China. Several are serving as WAACs, WAVES, SPARS and Marines throughout the U. S. and Canada.

A daily war service by all Soroptimists was that of combating rumors, fighting inflation and the black market—all under the leadership of the late Mrs. Bennett.

Miss Mildred Clum, president of the Soroptimist Club of Washington, presiding at the club's luncheon meeting yesterday, declared: "Soroptimism is international, it is democratic, it is active and forward looking. In 22 years it has grown by the very demands which have been made upon it, and while it is impossible while the conflict still rages to speak of what has been done in countries enslaved or where the conflagration of war is a very real and close thing, we know that our international liaison secretary, Miss Elizabeth Hawes of London, has kept the spirit alive and has maintained for us the privilege of retaining for women, wherever they are, whatever their race . . . self-respect, courage and will to live and do."

Bits of This and That . . .

The board of managers of the Women's Christian Association Home (chartered in 1870) will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning at 1719 13th st. nw. Mrs. William A. Scott, president for the past 15 years will present plans for the winter activities. Miss Florence Armitage, who has had charge of "The Lodge" at Lake Chautauqua, will be installed as supervisor of the home to succeed Miss Luella Pondexter, who was resident manager for 17 years . . . To say goodby and thank you to Mrs. Bess Heath Olmstead, national treasurer of the National League of American Pen Women, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, president, entertained members of the executive board of the league and a few guests. Mrs. Olmstead, who has been closely associated with cultural organizations here, is leaving soon for Seattle, Wash., where she and General Olmstead, U. S. Signal Corps, retired, will make their home.

Catholic Student Tea

To welcome the new feminine students of Catholic University the Association of Women Students will give a tea next Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in the foyer of Mullen Library on the campus, Dr. Eugenie A. Leonard, dean of women, announces. The guests of honor will be the Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick and the Right Rev. Msgr. Edward B. Jordan, rector and vice rector, respectively, of Catholic University. Combined with the tea will be a fashion show of 1943—parade of uniforms, with representatives from the following services and organizations — WAVES, Marines, Spars, WACS, WASPS, Army Nurse Corps, Navy Nurse Corps, Cadet Nurse Corps, American Red Cross, American Women's Voluntary Service and Air Raid Wardens. There will also be a student to represent the vocation of the religious life and those representing a mother, a student girl, an industrial worker and a Government worker. There will be approximately 700 women students at Catholic University this year, Dean Leonard reported.

Alumnae Entertained

— The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Phi Delta Gamma Graduate Woman's Fraternity will be entertained at Sunday night supper at 7 o'clock, on October 3, by Mrs. Frederick W. Case, 1740 N. Portal dr. nw.

Mrs. Case, who returned with her family during recent months from California, is remembered as Dr. Matalee Lake, graduate of George Washington University, where she did outstanding work in the field of philosophy. Many of her university associates and classmates will make this first fall meeting of the chapter an occasion for reunion.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ED STETTINIUS, the new Undersecretary of State, is known by Washington insiders for three things:

(1) How wrong he was regarding aluminum; (2) how right he was regarding rubber, and (3) his close association with the Russians.

The platinum-haired young U. S. Steel executive was the man who took the word of the Aluminum Corp. that it could supply ample aluminum and refused to O. K. more factory facilities at a time when Leon Henderson, Bob Nathan and other planners were warning, wringing their hands, and yelling that we must prepare to produce more aluminum.

Learning his lesson from aluminum, Stettinius later got out in front, and on rubber he was the man who constantly needeled Jesse Jones for nearly two years, urging that we begin building synthetic rubber plants—all to no avail. Jesse would not listen.

Stettinius' experience with the Russians was what influenced his appointment as Undersecretary of State. It began when Lend-Lease was a pitiful driblet trickling through to the Red army. The Russians, promised mountains, but given mole hills, were distressed. They could not understand the red tape, the delays.

Once, General Golikov, first head of the Russian Lend-Lease mission in Washington, went to the White House and, speaking through an interpreter, said that if Stalin had ordered a thing done and then found it didn't get done for three weeks, the men responsible for the delay would be kicked out. Later, General Golikov, disgusted, went back to Russia, is winning victories as commander of the Bryansk front.

Russians Puzzled

What the Russians couldn't understand was that the United States, the most industrialized nation in the world, the wealthiest, and one of the biggest, had only a few tanks, only a few guns, very little ammunition.

They did not realize that the USA, a firm believer in peace, actually maintained, until a short time before Pearl Harbor one of the smallest armies in the world. So, for a while the Russians actually thought we were holding out on them.

Gradually, however, Ed Stettinius dispelled this idea. He really went to bat. The Russians have seen him hold up a convoy while he picked up the long distance phone and persuaded factories to rush certain Russian goods. Stettinius would never accept "No."

Stettinius brought order and efficiency to Lend-Lease. Simultaneously the Russians brought their best experts to the USA. And their mission probably functions more efficiently even than the British. They know what they want, ask for it, and aren't satisfied until they get it. They never discuss politics, regard their political system as different from ours, and don't want them mixed. They stick entirely to technical discussions.

So they believe in Stettinius, and his actions as Undersecretary of State should have Russian confidence.

Army's Favorite Foods

SINCE THE TRUMAN Committee's investigation of food waste in the Army, the Quartermaster Corps has been as frugal as a Dutch housewife. Elaborate studies have been made of what the soldiers eat and what they leave on the plate, with the idea of cutting down the percentage of garbage.

It's hard on the pig farmers near the Army camps, but it saves the taxpayers' money.

After watching the eating habits of 16,000 soldiers at Chanute Field, Ill., the Quartermaster Corps gave each dish a rating, according to its popularity.

Roast chicken and apple pie rated 100. So did roast duck and roast ham. But creamed ham rated only 55. (QMC dietician Mary I. Barber explains: "Not many men like messed up food. Artemus Ward said: 'When I eat hash, I like to know what I'm eating'.")

Another unpopular dish was oyster stew, 58. (Westerners are suspicious of seafood.) Baked liver rated 75 and beef hearts 78.

In the vegetable field, QMC was puzzled to find canned peas more popular than frozen peas (79 to 59). Canned cream corn is the most popular vegetable (90), so it won a place on the menu for the coming Christmas dinner. And canned peas won a place on the Thanksgiving menu.

No matter what you may do to butter up spinach, it remains spinach and the soldiers gave it a rating of 41. It was just about the lowest of all.

Drastic Tire Shortage

AN OPA EXPERT makes the private forecast that by next February the country will be crying for Rubber Czar Jeffers to come back to Washington to finish the job of getting synthetic tires for the country. It is believed here by those who know the tire situation that the crest of the wave which Jeffers went out on is rapidly becoming a trough.

Jeffers has estimated that 17 million tires, both new and used, will be available in 1943. But OPA estimates that 25 million tires will be needed this year—not 17 million. Thus, a shortage of 8 million is indicated by the end of this year.

One index of the shortage is the fact that there are between 350,000 and 400,000 "floating certificates" — that is, certificates which have been granted by rationing boards for tires, new or used, but for which tires have not been found by the holders.

OPA experts describe the situation as "terribly serious," with emphasis on trucks. There are approximately five million trucks in the country, of which one million have been disqualified from obtaining any additional tires, new or used. The other four million may obtain such tires if they are to be had.

Those who know the inside story are much worried by the fact that the country got a bullish impression about rubber and tires from the resignation of Jeffers, which was generally interpreted as meaning that the situation was well in hand and that the emergency was over. The contrary, however, appears to be the fact. More than one insider is saying today that Jeffers got out of the way just before the roof fell in.

Merry-Go-Round

A high, air-minded War Department official says the length of the war depends on the weather this winter. If the weather is favorable for flying, the war in Europe might be over before next summer . . . Word has come back to Washington from Buenos Aires that a large shipment of United States aspirin, sent to an approved Argentine drug firm, was surreptitiously transferred to a German drug firm and retailed by them. The Argentine government does not recognize the United States black list.

Bioff's Wife Pays His $20,000 Fine

New York, Sept. 29 (AP)—A $20,000 fine imposed almost two years ago on William Bioff, West Coast labor leader, was paid today in the U. S. District Court, Southern District.

Assistant U. S. Attorney General Boris Kostelanetz, said the payment of the fine by Bioff's wife saved him from the possibility of serving 10 years in addition to his current 10-year prison sentence, and made him eligible for parole in the spring of 1945. Bioff was convicted on extortion charges.

NO. 4 IN A SERIES DEDICATED TO AMERICA'S WAR EFFORT

"I am the O-P-A!"

"Maybe you can't picture a little fellow like me holding an official title, or sitting on a Board of Directors. Frankly, I'd feel much more at home on a kiddie-car. But I represent America's future. I'm the next generation. And I'm going to make sure that when this war's over, America will have something left that's worth living for . . . and that means a Sound Civilian Economy. The only way we can guarantee it is to knockout the chiselers and the black-market operators . . . buy only the things we need . . . and be sure to buy them at fair and legal prices. That's why I call myself the 'OPA' . . . because it's really MY job—(and YOURS)—to safeguard the American way of living. After all, I'm the great American Consumer . . . because I have a good long span of years ahead of me. I'll drink lots of milk in my lifetime . . . and wear out lots of shoe-leather . . . and pretty soon I'll swap my three-cornered pants for something more presentable. But in the meantime, I need some help on this OPA job I'm doing. After all, the OPA doesn't belong to Uncle Sam . . . it belongs to us . . . and it's up to us to make it work. If you want me to take over when I grow up, give me a hand now . . . I'll make this old world a better place to live in."

AN OPEN MESSAGE TO THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON

The Home Front Pledge Campaign, now in progress, is an earnest call to you to cooperate with the Office of Price Administration in its program of fair prices and a fair share of goods for all Americans. During this campaign you will be called upon to pledge not to pay more than top legal prices and not to buy rationed goods without ration stamps. Keeping this pledge will mean your active participation in this important O. P. A. program. We in the O. P. A., as part of this wartime community, pledge our complete support to this campaign. With your whole-hearted cooperation our goals will be achieved.

Robert K. Thompson,
District Director,
Office of Price Administration

HERE ARE THE THINGS WE ALL MUST DO:

1. Pay no more than top legal prices.
2. Accept no rationed goods without giving up ration stamps.
3. When I question any price, I will talk it over with my dealer, and if I am not satisfied, I will take my receipt to the Price Clerk of my War Price and Ration Board.
4. I will buy only what I absolutely need, so that valuable machines and labor can be used to make airplanes, tanks and guns.
5. I will volunteer my few extra hours a week to serve at my War Price and Ration Board, helping to make price control and rationing a success in my neighborhood.
6. I will help others to know their responsibilities in wartime buying and will express my disapproval, as a citizen, whenever I hear of BLACK MARKET trading in my neighborhood; and I will refuse to trade where I must break the rules.
7. I will back the attack to the best of my ability through regular purchases of war stamps and bonds.
